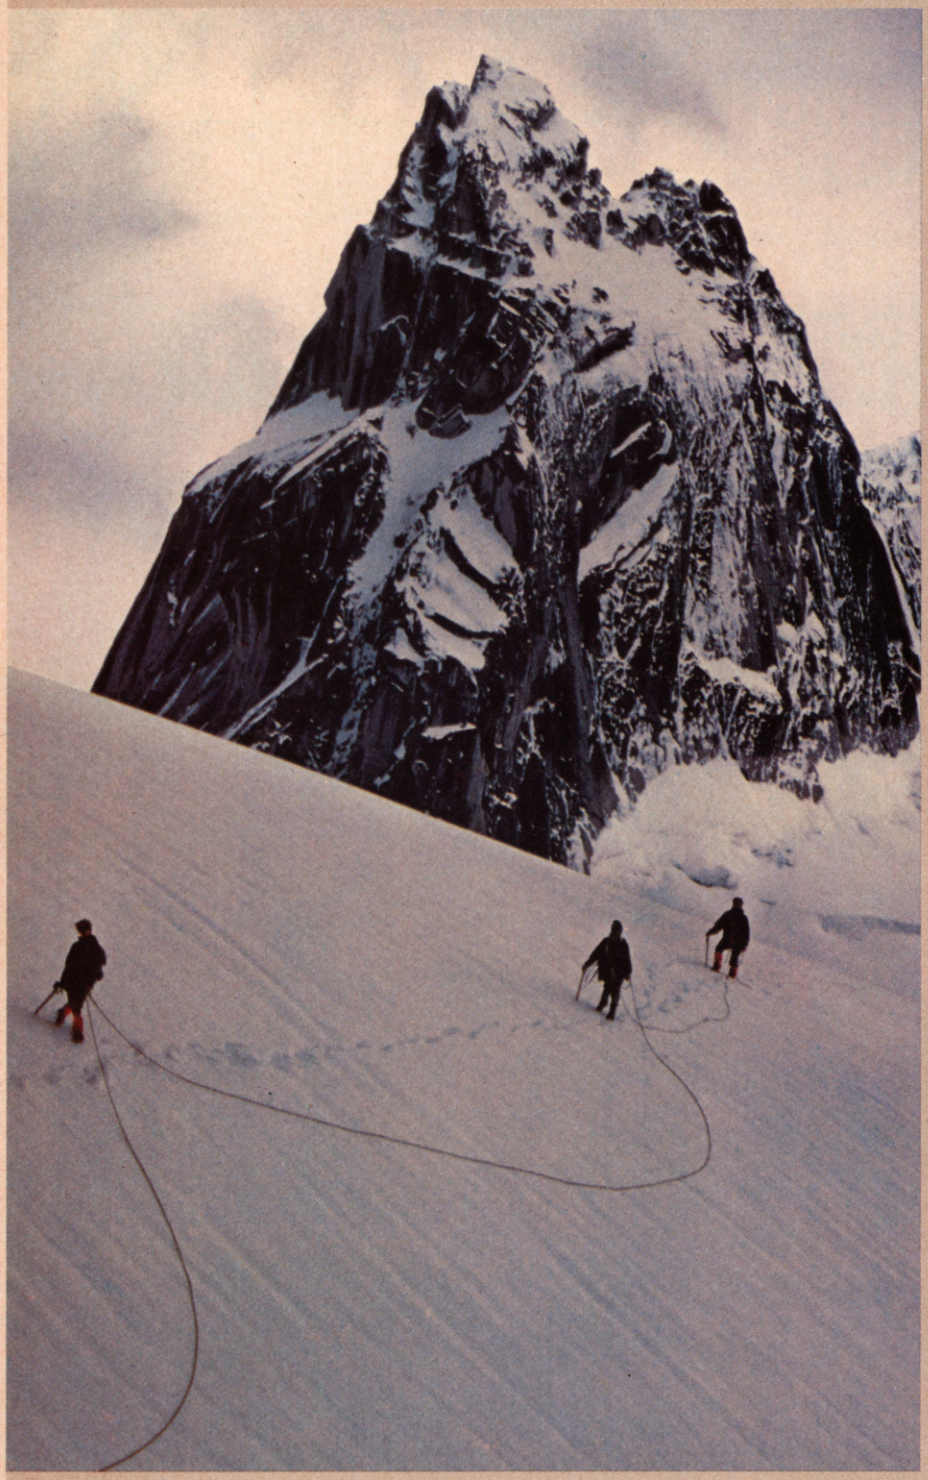
Purcell Mountains.
A rugged place for a smooth whisky to start.



WESTERN CANADA—The hardest part of the climbing is just getting enough air. I gulped it in. Icy. Thin.

And then we stopped, and looking around took my breath away all over again.

Later, thawing out by the fire, we knew we'd been someplace we could never forget.

Over Windsor Canadian, we talked about it all night long. That's some smooth whisky.

It's made from water that runs down from the glaciers. They use the local rye. And that high, clean air must have something to do with the way Windsor Canadian ages.

Rugged country. Smooth whisky. Both unforgettable.

Being a boxing fan can be such a bitter-sweet experience. Take the contents of this month's issue of The Ring, for example. While on the one hand we celebrate the outstanding achievements of the past year with The Ring's annual awards, we also have to face another challenge from those who want to banish boxing as a legal sport.

The State of New Jersey Commission of Investigation, having completed a two-year investigation into professional boxing, has come to the conclusion that the Garden State would be better off if prize fighting no longer sullied its sacred shores.

While a handful of journalists have defended boxing during this latest onslaught, most of the print and electronic media have reported the commission's findings as if they were gospel. Therefore, in an effort to balance the scales and offer a more even-handed picture, we present an article entitled: "Much To-Do About Nothing" by veteran boxing writer Wes Moon.

This article, while admittedly written by a friend of boxing, attempts to give our readers a fresh perspective on some of those individuals so anxious to make political headlines at boxing's expense. As you will discover reading Mr. Moon's piece, there's more going on here than immediately meets the eye.

So much for the bitter side. On a much more upbeat note are our 58th annual awards. While 1985 may not have been the best of years for boxing, it was not without its highlights. In fact, the number of remarkable candidates for Fighter of the Year were so numerous, we decided to share the honor between Marvelous Marvin Hagler and Donald Curry. Other categories were also highly competitive.

As in past years, we dedicate this issue to all the fighters who fought so bravely in 1985. I only wish those who want to ban boxing could walk a mile—or box 10 rounds—in their shoes. Maybe then, they would understand how special boxing is, and stop trying to throw the baby out with the bath water.

Reader Bernard Foy thinks that Frank Bruno's power will carry him to the top of the heavyweight heap. Bruno is seen here knocking out Larry Alexander in the second round of their bout in London.

BRITANIA RULES THE RING?

DON'T BE SURPRISED IF GREAT BRITAIN soon has a few more world champions following the success of Barry McGuigan. Frank Bruno may not have the nimble footwork of Muhammad Ali, or the experience of Larry Holmes, but he's the hardest hitter since George Foreman. The way Bruno kayoed Mike Jameson (who took Michael Dokes the distance) and his first round kayo over Lucien Rodriguez (who took Holmes the full course) proves my point.

The British middle and welterweight divisions are particularly strong with names like Herol Graham, Tony Sibson, Mark Kaylor, Colin Jones, and Lloyd Honeyghan. But let's not forget Terry Marsh, who will be challenging for the light welterweight title in the not too distant future.

KRONK CRITICISM

IT WAS A PLEASURE TO SEE ANOTHER pretend champion bite the canvas. Good riddance to Milton McCrory. Like fellow Kronk phonies Hilmer Kenty and Thomas Hearns, the "Ice Man" melted the first time he felt the heat of a world-class boxer who could punch. Long live Donald Curry.

McCrory, though, is not nearly as willfully misleading as pugilism's "Prince of Poppycock," Thomas Hearns. Before the Hagler fight, Hearns was a guest on TV's Soul Train. The Hit Man swung and missed to the embarrassment of all when he denied that his TKO loss to Ray Leonard had been his toughest fight. Instead, he picked his lopsided win over Luigi Minchillo!

I wish someone would explain to the Motor City Kidders that any number of "pretend" titles—even when supplemented with fiction—aren't worth one "real" title. And so far, Hearns and McCrory have yet to prove they're the best in any weight class.

A DIFFERENCE OF OPINION

AFTER READING THE PREPOSTEROUS comments of Mr. Michael Liss on the McGuigan-Pedroza bout in "Come Out Writing" (Nov. 1985), I too, must ask, "Who's Fouling Who?," as your leader above the letter asks.

Mr. Liss writes: "the plain fact is that McGuigan should have been disqualified for repeatedly hitting Pedroza after the bell sounded ending the ninth round." He asserts that the main reason for Pedroza's defeat was "the fearful—and unnecessary—beating" he received in those few seconds. Therefore, he tells us that McGuigan's "victory is tainted." And (get this!) he gripes to The Ring: "it is unfortunate that Ron Olver could not see past his personal prejudices" in reporting the fight from London (The Ring, August '85).

Fortunately, McGuigan's masterpiece against a great champion was seen by about 30 million people worldwide and it is doubtful if any one of them would concur with Mr. Liss's assessment. Give credit where credit is due, Mr. Liss. Barry McGuigan earned his title with an outstanding effort that merits his consideration for Fighter of the Year. Your attempt to demean his accomplishment is unwarranted.

ROBERT MULLIN
Brooklyn, New York

I MUST SAY I AGREE FULLY WITH Michael Liss's comments in his letter in your November '86 issue. British journalists have abandoned all attempts at objectivity where Barry McGuigan is concerned. They actually admire him for hitting low and after the bell because it shows "great fighting spirit." He kayoed Felipe Orozco with a forearm smash to the back of the neck, which was called a "brilliant left hook." This sort of stuff reached its peak with the hero v. villain trash that was published before his fight with Eusebio Pedroza.

I had a letter published in Boxing News (England's fight weekly) condemning this and suggesting that Pedroza deserved better. This prompted a number of replies suggesting that I should be thrown in the Tower for my insolence and for preferring a dirty spick to a red-blooded Britisher. Like I said at the time, it's a shame that a genuine bloke like McGuigan should cause so much chauvinism.

Round One

COUNTERFEIT COMEBACK?

It started out as one of those heart-rending stories that help humanize the often brutal sport of prize fighting. It ended in a shambles of suspicion, providing opponents of the Sweet Science with still another round of ammunition to fire at our beleaguered sport. I refer to the courageous comeback of Chicago cruiserweight Craig Bodzianowski.

AP Laserphoto

Cruiserweight Craig Bodzianoski, wearing his "Seattle Foot," prepares for a sparring session prior to his comeback bout with Francis Sargent.

Bodzianowski was 13-0 and on the rise when disaster struck in June of '84. Craig was riding his motorcycle when a car u-turned into him, pinning his right foot between the car and the motorcycle and mangling Bodzianowski's foot and ankle in the process. Doctors gave the badly injured fighter two choices: He could keep the foot and walk with a cane or crutch, or he could have the foot and ankle amputated.

The second option would allow Craig to be fitted with an artificial limb known as the Seattle Foot. With the aid of this device, Bodzianowski would have 80 percent use of his damaged leg.

"No way I was going to let myself be a cripple the rest of my life," Bodzianowski told Lacy J. Banks of the Chicago Sun-Times. "I wanted to fight again. And I couldn't do it with crutches or canes. I looked down at the foot and said, 'Adios. Cut it off.' "

Shortly after the amputation, while still a patient at Olympia Fields Osteopathic Hospital, Craig began his long journey back by exercising with barbells and handgrips. Determined to box again, he continued his rehabilitation at the Woodland Boys Club gym on Chicago's South Side. After months of gut-wrenching work, Bodzianowski was convinced he was ready to fight. All he had to do was gain the permission of the Illinois Athletic Board.

"If anybody can come back with that kind of handicap, Bodzianowski can," said Frank Glienna, Illinois boxing commissioner. "I did not feel it my place to deny his request for a new boxing license. His doctors have approved his comeback. He appears fit to me. Who am I to stand in his way? He deserves at least a shot."

Bodzianowski got his shot on December 14th at the Alan B. Shepard High School in Palos Heights. In the opposite corner was Francis Sargent, whom Craig had appointed over 10 rounds in his last fight before the accident. It didn't take 10 rounds this time. Fighting for the first time, outside the gym, on his artificial foot, Bodzianowski nailed Sargent with a left-right combination for a knockout in 1:05 of the second.

For awhile, it seemed like Bodzianowski's comeback would have a storybook ending. But boxing is not exactly "Never-Never Land." A few days later, loser Sargent was quoted in the Sun-Times as saying, "I threw the fight." Then, quicker than you can say "ten and out," Sargent recanted, claiming he had been misunderstood.

According to Sargent, he had received threatening phone calls prior to the fight telling him, "You'd better go down."

"I was off my pace completely," said Sargent. "I was not fighting my fight because of the stress I was under. I went down to give myself some time to recuperate."

Needless to say, Bodzianowski is convinced he scored a legitimate knockout. The Illinois Athletic Board is scheduled to hold a hearing on the matter as we go to press.

The really sad thing about the entire affair is that the ensuing scandal, even if it should ultimately prove to be a false alarm, tarnished what should have been a banner event for boxing. Regardless of what really transpired, Bodzianowski's magnificent courage should be an inspiration to all. Even if he never ducks between the ropes again, Craig has already won the biggest fight of his life.

FOREMAN STILL A HEAVYWEIGHT

Here's a positive boxing note without a sticky ending: Former world heavyweight champion George Foreman was recently honored by the United States Information Agency for participation in a variety of programs. During 1985, George conducted boxing clinics in Nigeria and Cameroon under the auspices of the USIA's Sports Athletic program. Foreman was described as one of the best ambassadors of goodwill ever to travel for America's overseas information agency. George's proved a hit with the African people, prompting a Lagos newspaper to carry the headline: "The World Needs More George Foremans." In Yaounde, the old champ led and coached a boxing clinic for 30 boxers and trainers which climaxed with a card attended by an SRO crowd of 5,000. Foreman also visited handicapped children, government officials, ministers, businessmen, and a reform school.

Before flying home from Nigeria, Foreman promised to return to help set up a youth center in Lagos, modeled after the one he founded in Houston. Way to go, George.

The ceremony took place inside the boxing ring shortly after Pernell's Olympic teammates Mark Breland, Evander Holyfield, Tyrell Biggs and Meldrick Taylor had scored victories on a card televised by ABC-TV.

FATAL FENDER-BENDER

It's best not to mess with the army in the Dominican Republic. Unfortunately, former WBC flyweight champion Eleoncio Mercedes found this out the hard way. Mercedes, who outpointed Freddie Castillo for the 112-pound crown on March 6, 1982, was shot to death during an argument with an army officer after a minor traffic accident in La Romana. According to published reports, the shooting occurred after Mercedes' car nicked the rear of another vehicle on a congested street. An argument ensued and Lt. Carlos Luciano Diaz of the La Romana airport security pumped two shots into the former boxing champion, effectively ending their dispute. A police spokesman said that charges would be filed against Diaz. Mercedes, who lost the WBC belt to Charlie Magri in his first defense, had his last bout on November 7, 1985. He was only 28 at the time of his death with an overall professional record of 14-12-2, with three knockouts.

ROSIN DUST

Gerry Cooney hasn't had a fight since he bowled over George Chaplin on December 8, 1984. When the Long Island heavyweight was arrested in Harrisburg, Pa. on disorderly conduct charges after an altercation at a Holiday Inn, there was much speculation that Gerry had finally returned to action. But as luck would have it, it was Gerry's bodyguard, Robert Wesnofske, who did all the fighting. According to Joseph Sweeney, assistant to Harrisburg Mayor Stephen Reed, Wesnofske got into a beef with a couple of off-duty cops, and ended up getting punched in the face after he ripped one cop's sweater . . . IBF heavyweight champion Michael Spinks was the honorary Santa at the Friars Club's 82nd annual Christmas party in New York City. Spinks handed out over 1,000 gifts to needy kids, but when a truck carrying extra gifts was delayed in traffic, the "champ" reached into his pocket and gave each kid $10 . . . Cat Davis, the only woman to ever grace the cover of The Ring, is being sued by Sal Algieri, her ex-manager and ex-husband . . . The British Boxing Board of Control announced that Barry McGuigan has relinquished his British featherweight crown . . . Heavyweight knockout sensation Mike Tyson has inked a four-fight deal with ABC-TV for a reported $850,000 . . . Sugar Ray Leonard was ripped off to the tune of $34,000 in cash and jewelry by a woman he met in a Las Vegas night club. A vice officer handling the case told the Las Vegas Review-Journal that Leonard "had a few drinks with the woman (in his room) and then showed the woman out and went to bed." Police suspect that the woman returned with a hotel key she might have stolen from the suite.

Gerry Cooney and a training companion do their roadwork along Route 30 in Lancaster, Pennsylvania. Earlier that day, Cooney and four other men were charged with disorderly conduct in the bar of the Holiday Inn in Harrisburg.

PUNCH LINES

International Boxing Federation president Bob Lee, explaining why Aaron Pryor was stripped of his junior welterweight title: "His (Pryor's) failure to make a mandatory defense within the time period is inexcusable and shows a total disregard for fighters who are training for a shot at his title. He's got to come to grips with his problems."

MUCH TO-DO ABOUT NOTHING

The Ring Answers The New Jersey State Commission Of Investigation's Call For A Ban On Boxing

by Wes Moon

IF YOU STUMBLE UPON A FEW ANTS IN your house and vaguely suspect the presence of termites, don't hesitate.

Burn down your house.

As bereft of logic as the above may sound, this is, basically, the recommendation of the New Jersey State Commission of Investigation following an expensive, two-year investigation of boxing in the Garden State.

The final of two reports by the New Jersey SCI, purportedly on "Organized Crime in Boxing," was issued Dec. 16 last. In March of 1984 the SCI had issued an interim report castigating the supervision of boxing in the state.

In neither the interim report in 1984, nor the final report of Dec. 16, was there even a hint at addressing the real issue.

A perfunctory look at boxing in New Jersey in 1984 by one not especially acquainted with the sport would have re-

Some poetic justice might be found in the fact that Fortunato was not re-elected and is under indictment for soliciting and receiving bribes. Kimmelman resigned under the pall of a $6.5 million computer installation awarded without bids being taken and the awarding of the multi-million dollar driver's license contract to William Taggart without the recipient's name made public.

Robert W. Lee, who guided New Jersey boxing through the rapid growth period from 1978 until he was replaced by referee Larry Hazzard in late 1985. Lee is currently president of the International Boxing Federation.

vealed instantly the cause of problems in regulating the sport—decades of legislative neglect. The post of Athletic Commissioner in the state, Boxing Commissioner, if you will, was regarded as a scrap of political flotsam main-stream politicians had little interest in. It was a bone to be thrown to the blacks.

In 1976 former tennis great Althea Gibson quit the post in disgust when it became apparent her talents would be wasted there. That was the year the Meadowlands race track in the East Rutherford Sports Complex opened and we happened upon Ms. Gibson as she awaited a meeting with officials there.

Her great dream was to place a major tennis tournament in the state-owned facility.

Our understanding at the time was that Ms. Gibson not only was refused financial support, but was given to understand that the "Athletic Commissioner" title applied only to amateur and pro boxing and wrestling in New Jersey.

Robert W. Lee, who guided the sport through the rapid growth period of boxing from 1978 until he was replaced by referee Larry Hazzard late in 1985, was "on loan" from his position in the Consumer Affairs office to assist Ms. Gibson and went on "permanent loan" to assist former heavyweight boxing champion Jersey Joe Walcott, who replaced Ms. Gibson as commissioner.

To avoid being accused of using the hysterical rhetoric favored by the SCI in fashioning its reports, let us take a clear look at the situation prior to the SCI interim report of 1984:

The legislated pay for athletic commissioner in New Jersey prior to Ms. Gibson's being appointed was $5,000. She received a raise and the munificent salary of $7,500. The athletic commission had no real appropriation, but scrounged for a budget what it could from the consumer affairs department, which was under the Department of Law and Public Safety.

Below we have prepared a table of the Athletic Commission's budget it scrounged from the Division of Consumer Affairs, along with the revenues to the state generated under the leadership of Lee, for make no mistake about it, Lee was the guiding force under both Ms. Gibson and Walcott. The revenue to the state totaled below was derived from taxes, license fees and TV revenues.

Year	Budget	Income to N.J.
1976	$ 48,000	$ 38,946
1977	$ 48,693	$ 56,748
1978	$ 42,768	$ 74,779
1979	$ 23,427	$124,998
1980	$ 45,085	$215,290
1981	$ 51,179	$232,101
1982	$ 62,206	$444,464
1983	$ 83,791	$549,850
1984	$203,142	$397,398
1985	$220,000	———

The rapid growth of boxing in New Jersey, beginning in 1978, was of course, the result of the opening of casinos in Atlantic City and the popularity of the sport with visitors from throughout the country and with television viewers. In 1983 alone it was estimated $8 million in TV contracts were awarded for fights in New Jersey; $1 million was paid for site fees; $2 million to boxers and $140,000 to officials.

We use the 1983 figures because that was the year upon which the SCI's interim report of March, 1984 was based primarily.

The report's chief recommendation was that Lee be suspended for six months and that the athletic commissioner be replaced by a board of three commissioners.

Never did the SCI castigate the legislators of New Jersey for total neglect. Never did it lash out at New Jersey for handing Walcott and Lee a near-impossible task to perform with the funds provided.

Witness the scene the SCI chose to ignore:

The under-funded Athletic Commission had two full-time employees during this period of tremendous growth. The state boxing inspectors, including the chief inspector, were part-time employees earning the grandiose sum of $15 per event. This was legislated and couldn't be changed by Lee.

In addition to overseeing the morning weigh-ins before fights, the inspectors also: had the responsibility of checking gloves and other equipment; overseeing the dressing rooms; determining that no unlawful substances were used by cornermen or cutmen and ascertaining that the various licenses were in order and the proper taxes paid.

Lee, who is president of the United States Boxing Association, said of the period, "The only thing they (New Jersey officials) were consistent about was in not giving me help."

Incidentally, the SCI, in its interim report, took pains to suggest there was something wrong with Lee's being an officer of the USBA and International Boxing Federation, ignoring that Abe Greene, who preceded Althea Gibson as commissioner, was National Boxing Association president for many years.

In order to keep competent help during this period, Lee was forced to give the employees double jobs—i.e., the chief inspector doubled as timekeeper to pad out his per event salary. Lee gives former Attorney General Irwin I. Kimmelman credit for finding a way to better the legislated $7,500 salary of the athletic commissioner. He made Walcott and Lee "Project Specialists," which permitted Walcott's salary to rise to a maximum of $39,000.

But it was also Kimmelman who ordered the SCI probe with the strong backing of former Assemblyman "Buddy" Fortunato, Essex County Democrat. The first report on the probe took on the appearance of a missile aimed directly at Lee, who had been nominated for the commissioner's post vacated by Walcott. Fortunato, one of the sponsors of the legislation to expand the commission to three, went so far as to hold "Legislative" hearings on boxing.

A fighter knocked out in New Jersey is automatically suspended for 60 days. Try that rule in football or apply it to a "beaned" baseball star.

Some poetic justice might be found in the facts that Fortunato was not reelected and is under indictment for soliciting and receiving bribes and Kimmelman resigned under the pall of a $6.5 million computer installation awarded without bids being taken and the awarding of the multi-million dollar driver's license contract to William Taggart without the recipient's name made public.

Even though there are questions regarding the SCI's reasons for lambasting Lee in its interim report, rather than centering on the sad state of neglect of the Athletic Commission, the SCI must be applauded for uncovering the fact Lee did accept campaign contributions from figures engaged in boxing in New Jersey when he was seeking the World Boxing Association presidency.

The rooting out of this "acorn," however, doesn't justify the overall unsatisfactory performance of the SCI. From a body appropriated $1.94 million in 1985 and able to afford a $70,000 yearly salary to its director James J. Morley, better recommendations to combat crime in boxing should be expected than "Ban boxing," or, in the SCI wording, ". . . that the legislature enact a law prohibiting professional boxing in New Jersey."

The report is titled, "Organized Crime in Boxing" and the reader of the 126 pages leading to the recommendations is bored stiff with records of interviews with very minor people in New Jersey boxing. The report rambles on presenting conversations with Carlo Dee, a minor promoter, someone named Barry Shapiro, some people named Arthur R. Pelullo and his brother, Leonard, and someone named Anthony Cristelli, reportedly a fight manager. About the only names readily recognizable that figure prominently in the report are those of Joe Hand, Philadelphia promoter, and Frank Gelb, Philadelphia, who has been active on the boxing scene at Atlantic City.

The SCI also recommends that if its call for the ban of boxing goes unheeded, legislation should be passed banning ". . . all blows above the shoulders."

Chiefly the conversations dwelt around the questions relating to whether the managers or fight promoters knew such-and-such alleged underworld figure and did they ever borrow any money from them, or did they invest in certain boxers or events. Now and then, just as any old blind hog will root out an acorn, they found a boxer who subbed for another under an assumed name, or fought under a phony weight.

The SCI should be applauded for these few finds.

The undying shame of the SCI and New Jersey will be, however, that after satisfying themselves that possibly some fight managers and promoters know and associate with some outlaw figures, their recommendation is "ban boxing."

What happened to, "Let's root out this little smattering of scum. Let's send some people to jail and step on the few little ants we stumbled over"?

The SCI exhibited in two particular instances abysmal ignorance when it concluded ". . . no truly viable social or economic benefits can be derived from such legal savagery," and when it quoted George Vacsey of the New York Times as terming a boxer as the victim of "sanctioned mugging."

The obvious questions, of course, are, "Who the hell is George Vacsey?" and what gives a very undistinguished New Jersey commission the right to decide that no viable or social economic benefits are derived from a sport enjoyed by many?

The SCI should be called upon to explain why, in its final report on "Organized Crime in Boxing" it reported interviews and discussions with only minor characters in the sport. The major promoters and managers of fights and boxers in New Jersey aren't mentioned, except in passing.

Bob Arum, president of Top Rank, Inc., New York; Dan Duva, president of Main Event Productions, West Paterson; Russell Peltz, Philadelphia; Don Elbaum and Ted Menas, who promote the bouts at the Tropicana Casino Hotel; Emanuel Steward, head of the Kronk team out of Detroit and Lou Duva, who oversees a great number of boxers, are all mysteriously bypassed for insignificant figures.

This group of promoters and managers are involved in by far the major promotions in the state, but they play little or no role in the SCI report.

If we are to assume from this that only the minor, fringe figures are involved with criminal figures, would it not be logical to assume to SCI recommendation should be to stamp out these minor elements?

The SCI also recommends that if its call for the ban of boxing goes unheeded, legislation should be passed banning ". . . all blows above the shoulders."

No comment is needed on the SCI observation that a $10 million industry is of no economic benefit.

The deep suspicion is, to the shame of the taxpayers in New Jersey who foot the SCI's bills, that, lacking anything constructive, the SCI sought headlines such as a recommendation to ban boxing would reap. It leaned heavily on what Arum terms "The AMA crap" concerning the potential for head injuries and did at least score some points in the quest for headlines.

Gabe Pressman, an aging telecaster, looked straight into the camera and said, "Boxing is legalized murder." Then he droned on about injuries and torn muscles. Neither the SCI, Pressman, nor any of the newspapers that fell for the SCI line, bothered to check and inform their listeners and readers in which sports there are the most serious injuries and deaths.

Dan Rather, another TV newscaster, recently repeated an AMA handout claiming spinal injuries in football are down 75 percent.

Many of the "Ban boxing" clan use the trite reasoning, "It's the only sport wherein one is trying to hurt the other."

This is pure nonsense. No boxer wants to injure his opponent. He wants to win. And, even if a boxer did want to hurt his opponent would it matter if it's obvious it doesn't happen in boxing nearly as much as in several other sports? Spinal injuries are hardly ever heard of in boxing, there are no broken legs, few separated shoulders and far fewer concussions.

If you think boxers receive more blows to the head than those in some other sports, visit locker rooms and see which athletes leave more teeth on the shelves before competing.

You never hear a fight manager boast,

A perfunctory look at boxing in New Jersey in 1984 by one not especially acquainted with the sport would have revealed instantly the cause of problems in regulating the sport—decades of legislative neglect.

"My fighter boxes hurt."

There is no resistance in boxing to tests for drugs. A fighter knocked out in New Jersey is automatically suspended for 60 days. Try that rule in football or apply it to a "beaned" baseball star.

Pressman, in his program, stated an average of 11 boxers are killed yearly. Would he broadcast the number of football players killed yearly, then stare at the camera and utter, "Football is legalized murder"?

The simple fact is few athletes, generally speaking, are better trained than boxers or supervised more closely when in competition. The referees closely watch a boxer for signs of distress and doctors are at ringside.

The SCI shamelessly made recommendations for "Passport" type identification books for boxers on a national level; suspension of fighters after a loss or KO and the presence of doctors and ambulance crews at fights without mentioning Lee inaugurated the "passports" and the others have been common practice in New Jersey.

The state's taxpayers deserve more for their $1.94 million. □

ANOTHER KIND OF PUNCH-DRUNK

by Joseph D'O'Brian

The closer a heavyweight comes to the championship, the more natural it is for him to be a little bit insane, secretly insane, for the heavyweight champion of the world is either the toughest man in the world or he is not, but there is a real possibility he is. It is like being the big toe of God.

—Norman Mailer

NOT TOO LONG AGO, SOME FRIENDS and I got into a discussion of how there are so many top-flight boxers today who are getting into terrible trouble outside the ring. We weren't concerned with the odd barroom brawl, or the occasional one drink too many, or any of the little scrapes a healthy young man can get into now and then. We were talking about the guys who are ending up in prison, or in mental institutions, or with severe drug habits or other life-threatening emotional problems.

We came up with quite a list of names and incidents, all of them from the past three or four years.

Middleweight contender Tony Ayala, after a long series of problems with the law, is now serving a 20-year prison sentence for rape.

Bruce Curry, former WBC junior welterweight champ, was recently confined to a mental institution after displaying violently psychotic behavior.

Aaron Pryor, the real junior welterweight champ, is rumored to now weigh less than 120 lbs. Since it can't actually be proven. I had better not say how he got so fashionably slender.

Alexis Arguello, former lightweight champ, recently admitted to a problem with cocaine.

Former WBA heavyweight champ Mike Weaver attempted suicide following his loss to Michael Dokes in 1983.

And those are only a few that I remember off the top of my head. We must have come up with at least a dozen more.

Now, it may well be that on a percentage basis, boxers are no more likely than any other group of people to commit crimes, abuse drugs or become emotionally disturbed. But it did seem to us that boxing has always been an unsafe profession in that respect. Former world champs Joe Louis, Johnny Bratton, Mike McTigue, Ad Wolgast and Battling Nelson became insane. Freddie Mills, Randy Turpin and Billy Papke were suicides, Papke taking his wife with him. Mickey Walker, Benny Lynch, Sonny Liston and countless others died of alcohol or drug abuse. And the boxers who were what my mother called "tortured souls" must number in the thousands.

There might be any number of theories as to why so many boxers end up this way, and probably none of them are entirely correct. But this is a subject we had better think about. Boxing's reputation in the world at large couldn't be worse than it is right now, and it wouldn't hurt our standing at all if we were to start looking after our own a little more. So in the interest of debate, as usual, I present a few ideas and opinions. (I welcome, nay, require your comments on this, by the way. Write me c/o The Ring.)

The simplest answer to the problem is that boxers are overpaid. I will say right up front that I think this is nonsense. Most boxers are forced to work another job besides boxing, and those who can actually make their livings in the ring deserve to make as much as they can get. But it is true that if a fairly naive young man is making more money than he knows what to do with, it's easy for him to buy a lot of heartache. This has always been a problem: Lots of fighters today blow their money on cocaine; a few years ago they blew it at the racetrack.

Sonny Liston and his wife Geraldine relax in a Chicago hotel room in 1963 shortly after his second fight with Floyd Patterson. Seven years later Mrs. Liston discovered Sonny's body in their home in Las Vegas, dead of a drug overdose.

Joe Louis, of course, is the classic example of a man who let money drive him over the edge. Louis made millions in the ring, but by the end of his career he was several hundred thousand dollars in debt. As far as anyone can figure it, Louis simply failed to realize that he wasn't always going to have such tremendous earning power. When he had it, he spent it; "security" was a word he didn't know. As a result, Louis ended up destitute, living on handouts. Perhaps it was this that drove him insane.

Shortly before Louis died, someone told him, "It's too bad you're not fighting today; you'd have made so much more money." Louis replied, "That doesn't matter. I still would have blown it all."

That's probably true. It's human nature to want to blow money. I know I spend like a sailor when I have it, and if I had more, I'd spend more. My friend Herb Goldman once told me about a former welterweight champ (still alive) who was in the habit of buying cars, then simply abandoned them when he got tired of them. It's hard to get rid of several million dollars, but it can be done. At any rate, this fellow ended up broke, went through a long period of emotional turmoil, and only now seems to be pulling himself together. There are a lot of similar stories I could tell.

But money in itself doesn't make a man crazy. Look at Larry Holmes or Ray Leonard. They each made millions, and they each seem to like the nice things that money can buy. But they were careful. They'll never go broke, and thus it's unlikely that money will ever drive them to destruction. So you can't say that making money makes boxers do crazy things.

Losing money will make anyone crazy. I should imagine it would be easy enough to keep most boxers from ending up broke. Many businesses offer financial counseling to their employees; why can't boxing's governing bodies do the same for boxers? If the WBA, WBC and IBF really wanted to make themselves useful, they could offer seminars on investments, or on basic principles of business administration, or they might recommend brokers and financial advisers to boxers who need them. Something like this would be useful to any boxer, whether he was making $200 per fight or $2 million.

Another theory is that drugs are too readily available these days. This, too, is too simplistic an answer, I believe. Booze, heroin, cocaine and what have you have been around forever, and people have always abused them. But it is true that when you have a lot of career pressures—as what boxer doesn't?—mixed with a good deal of free time, the temptation to abuse drugs becomes greater.

Very often, a drug abuser who is well-known finds it harder to get satisfactory treatment than a drug abuser who is just Joe Average. If a celebrity checks himself into a drug clinic, he'll be hounded to death by the news media, and this is common knowledge. Therefore, a good many well-known athletes avoid treatment for fear of publicity, with the result that the problem gets worse.

Here, again, the Alphabet Boys could help—if they wanted to. They're good at doing things in secret: Why couldn't they offer strictly confidential treatment to boxers who abuse drugs, in a compassionate, non-judgmental atmosphere? They're pretty good at calling for punishment of boxers who are caught failing the urine test: Why not help them to pass the test in the first place?

But this is not a problem for which the Alphabet Boys should be blamed. It's a problem that's been around for many years, ever since boxing became a big-money sport at the end of the last century.

The reason why so many fighters go over the edge, I'm pretty sure, is pressure. There was a time, when boxing wasn't so lucrative, when it was controlled by the it's-just-a-game British instead of the win-at-all-costs Americans—when a fighter might want to get to the top and stay there, but wouldn't go all to pieces if he didn't succeed.

That's not the way it is now. A fighter must get to the top today; if he doesn't, he's nothing. And even if he does get to the top, if ever he falls, he falls forever. I won't go into a long sociological discussion of how this has happened, but it has happened: Great isn't good enough. Best is the only thing that matters, and best doesn't last forever. And when it's driven home to you that you're no longer the best, or even that you might not be the best, it's going to hurt.

It's interesting to note that you seldom see spectacularly self-destructive behavior on the parts of boxers who aren't world-class. I've known a few fighters, and I've found that the really great ones are a nice enough bunch of guys, but the ones I really admire as men are the club fighters, the ones who are going nowhere fast, and know it. They're the guys you want to sit down with, have a few beers and discuss the nature of the universe.

The club fighters are balanced: They know they're not the best, and maybe they've realized that they don't have to drive themselves crazy over it.

For the really first-class fighters, though, it's different. They are being tested every time they breathe. They're standing on top of a hill, with a hundred other guys trying to knock them off. Remember when you played king-of-the-hill when you were little? Remember how it was fun trying to get up the hill, but when you became king, you were suddenly under too much pressure to enjoy yourself? Now imagine that pressure multiplied by ten thousand. What's surprising is that so many great fighters manage to stay sane.

It's interesting to look at the various forms insanity takes when it strikes a fighter. Joe Louis, for instance, became convinced that a group of faceless men were trying to kill him. He took to sleeping behind flimsy barricades of furniture and clothing, and refusing to eat any food that his wife hadn't prepared. It doesn't take a psychiatrist to figure this out. When he was champ, Louis had to live with the fact that sooner or later, someone—he didn't know who—would come along and take his title away. When life became too much for him, he naturally reverted to what must have been his greatest fear.

Ad Wolgast, the lightweight champ, lost his mind a couple of years after he lost the title to Willie Ritchie in 1912. Long after, he would be seen on the streets in the early morning, running, throwing punches at the air. If a passerby asked him what he was doing, Wolgast would reply, "I'm fighting Joe Gans in a few weeks. Gotta get in shape." Gans had died in 1910.

Unlike Louis, who reverted to his great fear, Wolgast reverted to what must have been his great joy: the days before he won the title, when he was trying to claw his way up the hill. And that was where he stayed: an old man, still training for his phantom match with Gans.

If you want a modern example, look at Gerry Cooney. Following his loss to Holmes, he went into a deep depression, brooding like Achilles in his tent over his great failure. Now, this wasn't entirely Cooney's fault. If this had been an ordinary heavyweight title fight, Cooney would have been congratulated for a good try (which it was), then he might have fought his way back up and landed a rematch. As it was, he had the pride of all white America riding on his left hand, and that's a big load for one hand to carry. No wonder he was reduced to a quivering jelly that sat around saying "I'm sorry." We do it to our fighters, just as much as they do it to themselves.

I will admit that I don't have a ready solution to all this. I don't know if the boxing world needs a major attitude adjustment, or if this is by nature a sport that eats its own children, or if the problem lies in society as a whole.

But whatever the answer might be, we have to discuss the question. Not all great fighters mess themselves up, but if enough of them do that eventually, this problem may be more dangerous than the AMA and the Alphabet Boys put together. □

SOLID GOLD MAN

AS IF ROCKY IV WAS NOT ENOUGH! Lippe, a play about veteran fight manager Lippe Breidbart, opened at New York's Quaigh Theatre on December 18, 1985 and ran for 12 performances. Lippe is best known as the man who guided Tommy (Hurricane) Jackson to a shot at Floyd Patterson's world heavyweight title on July 29, 1957.

Lippe was born in Galacia on March 7, 1903. "It was part of Austria then, but now it's part of Poland," explains Lippe. "I came to the U.S. in 1913 at the age of 10. First we lived on Houston Street (in New York), and then we moved to 147 Ludlow. It was a tough neighborhood. The kids would call me 'Greenhorn' and slap me around. My mother was afraid that I'd be knifed, but I started to fight back.

"When I was 12, I saw some other kids boxing in the backyard of our building. I became interested, and said I would like to box. I fought once and got the shit kicked out of me. I fought again; the same thing happened. Finally, I started winning. By the age of 13-14, I was very strong and athletic.

"I started hanging around gyms and fight clubs, watching fighters spar. I fought a few pros in workouts and got licked. I saw Benny Leonard go at it with Benny Valgar. Before I knew it, I'd learned how to box."

Former heavyweight contender Tommy (Hurricane) Jackson looks on while his mother prepares one of his favorite dishes in this 1957 photograph taken shortly before Jackson challenged Floyd Patterson for the heavyweight title. The other gentleman peering into the cook pot is Jackson's manager, Lippe Breidbart, subject of a recent play.

Lippe joined the U.S. Army in 1919. "I was 16—two years underage—but I got in and was stationed with the Army Service Detachment at West Point. When I got there, some guys came out of the barracks and said they'd 'just kicked the shit out of a jew bastard.' The guy they'd beaten turned out to be an Italian from New York."

Lippe won a reputation with his fists. "Before long, guys were asking me to teach them how to fight. Then my mother had me dragged out of the army and I went to work as a messenger in the fur business."

Breidbart eventually became a furrier, but he always remained a boxing man, first and foremost. "The first fighter I managed was Jack Irwin from the west coast," remembers Lippe. "He had a few fights and then he quit. The first guy I had who really made some headway was Nat Kawler. He beat (former world junior lightweight champion) Mike Ballerino in Schenectady in 1927 and Ray Miller at Ridgewood Grove the following year."

Lippe eventually bought the Williamsburg Gym in Brooklyn. Among the fighters he developed were Milton and Ruby Kessler, Gene Kiernan, Danny Giovanelli, Al Hersh, Hy Meltzer, and Vinnie Cidone. It was as manager of Tommy (Hurricane) Jackson, however, that Breidbart remains best remembered.

"He was amazing. He was like the golem of Jewish legend—the statue of a warrior who came to life and crushed the Philistines, but who still had the mind of a man of stone. The sculptor who created him gave him a bag of marbles to count when he wasn't fighting in order to keep him out of trouble.

"There are a million stories I could tell about Jackson. I remember riding with him in his car when someone cut him off. Jackson tore after him until the guy pulled off at a gas station and got out of his car. Hurricane grabbed a hold of him and pulled a knife.

"I rushed up and grabbed Jackson. I said, 'What are you, crazy? You wanna use a knife on this man!' He said, 'I gotta use the knife. You told me it was against the law for me to use my fists outside the ring.' He was amazing.

"Jackson could only relate to kids. He'd take a bunch of them and have them work out with boxing gloves. Then he'd take them in his open car and buy them ice cream."

Israeli boxing trainer Boruch Feldman says that pro boxing in Israel could really get off the ground if Lippe were induced to settle in the Holy Land. There are boxing men who swear by Lippe, and the man is certainly a fund of fistic lore.

The play Lippe, written, directed, and produced by Ron Scott Stevens, starred William Hickey (who played "The Don" in Prizzi's Honor) in the title role.

Teamwork is making a comeback in America.

Cooperation on the production line helped America win World War II. We're in another kind of battle today—a fight for economic survival in an increasingly competitive world market. Cooperation in the workplace is helping us meet this challenge too.

In plants and offices throughout the country, management is asking employees for their ideas on how to increase productivity and improve the work environment. And workers and their unions are responding with a wealth of practical suggestions and a renewed spirit of cooperation.

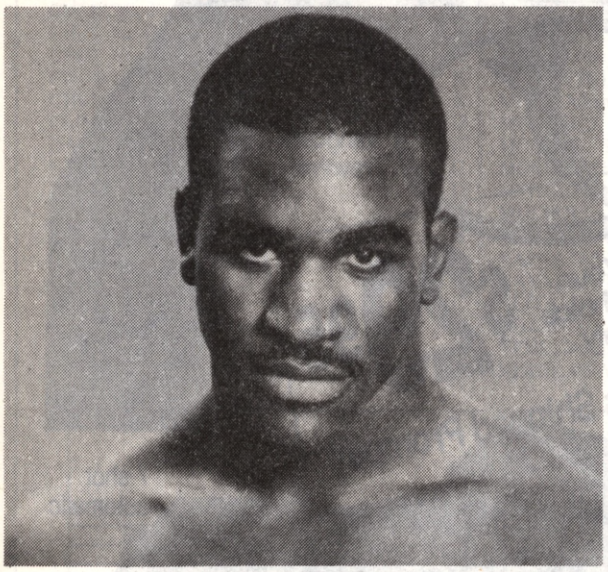
Ring Side Reports

FIGHTER OF THE MONTH



Cruiserweight contender Evander Holyfield became the first of the 1984 Olympians to win THE RING's Fighter of the Month award by virtue of his impressive knockout over Anthony Davis.

While some members of the 1984 Olympic boxing team have been accused of fighting soft touches since turning pro, nobody has dared criticize the calibre of opposition cruiserweight Evander Holyfield has faced. It's been one tough guy after another for Holyfield. In his latest bout, Evander scored a fourth round TKO over Anthony Davis. It was an impressive victory for two reasons. First, David was rated among the top 10 cruiserweights in the world. Secondly, Holyfield proved that he can take it as well as dish it out, surviving several of Davis' potent left hooks before prevailing with a devastating attack of his own. The performance was good enough to earn Holyfield The Ring's Fighter of the Month award.

This month's runner-up spot is shared by two new champions. They are Californian J.B. Williamson, who won the vacant WBC light heavyweight title with a 12-round unanimous decision over Prince Mamah Mohammad, and Yugoslavian Slobodan Kacar, who won the IBF version of the 175-pound crown with a 15-round split decision over Eddie Mustafa Muhammad.

Honorable mention goes to lightweight Greg Haugen for his first round blastout of Charlie (White Lightning) Brown. □

WILLIAMSON-MOHAMMED
Vacant WBC Light Heavyweight Title

INGLEWOOD, CALIF.—THE cold statistics show that J.B. Williamson is a world champion. Most, however, will need further convincing after Williamson's clear but unimpressive 12-round unanimous decision over Prince Mamah Mohammed for the vacant WBC light heavyweight title at the Forum.

The scoring of judges Dr. James Jen-Kin (117-111), Marty Sammon (117-111), and Dick Young (116-112) showed that Williamson is the best light heavyweight in southern California. Now he must add further credibility to his championship—preferably uniting the world light heavyweight crowns.

Mohammed, 171½, Hollywood, is usually a slow starter who picks up points with a left jab until he begins to dominate in the later rounds with speed, accuracy, and a reasonable amount of power. He seemed unprepared, however, for the physical tactics of Williamson, 173, Inglewood, who bullied, shoved, and spun Mohammed in the numerous clinches.

Williamson, more aggressive, stronger, and surprisingly quicker, was in charge after scoring heavily in round five. Body shots began to take their toll on Mamah from the sixth. Mohammed, supposedly the better boxer, was made to look limited and awkward.

Mohammed tired badly, and Williamson was in complete control by the 10th round. Mamah was on the verge of a knockout several times in the closing sessions, but J.B. refused to press his advantage. He let the game but very weak Mohammed off the hook.

Williamson forced the fight in the first two sessions, scoring cleanly with uppercuts and combinations. Mohammed counter-punched effectively in round three, then came out fast behind his jab in the fourth in an effort to take center ring. Williamson scored with a hard right uppercut to the body, but Mohammed kept working in an effort to keep him off balance.

J.B. dominated the fifth round with combos to the head and body after pinning Mamah in a neutral corner. A thumping right to the body appeared to hurt Mohammed in the sixth round, and Williamson was slightly busier (and more accurate) in the seventh. Mamah beat J.B. to the punch for most of the eighth, then wobbled in the final minute.

Both scored solidly in a well contested ninth round, Williamson punching with a bit more authority than his rival. J.B. landed his best left hook of the contest in the 10th. Mohammed gamely tried to rally, but was outpunched by Williamson, who raised his arms in triumph as he went to his corner.

J.B. opened the 11th with a right and left, then wobbled Mamah with a double right. Mohammed had all that he could do to last the round.

Prince Mamah gave chase

J.B. Williamson (on the left in the fancy trunks) connects with a right to the head of Prince Mamah Mohammed. Williamson outpointed Mohammed over 12 rounds for the vacant WBC light heavyweight title in Los Angeles.

in the final round, but there was no steam in his punches, and J.B. took the session with his cleaner hitting.

Williamson is now 22-1 with eight knockouts. Mohammed is 30-2-2 with 16 kayoes. Martin Denkin refereed. Like Mohammed, the new champ looked limited and awkward. The market value of world light heavyweight champs is down due to inflation.

Michael Nunn, 161, North Hollywood, went to 11-0 with a unanimous decision over Billy Robertson, 160, Inglewood, not losing a round. The 9-7 Robertson, once considered a prospect, has now lost six bouts in a row. Terry Smith, referee.

Oscar Muniz, 123, Pico Rivera, and undefeated Tony Montoya, 121, Salt Lake City, had their scheduled 10 declared a technical draw at 1:25 of the second round after an unintentional head butt opened a cut near Muniz's left eye. Larry Rozadilla, referee.

Raul (Jibaro) Perez, 119½, Tijuana, won a split decision over Lucilo Nolasco, 119½, Bell, Calif., in the 10-round walk-out bout. Nolasco raced to an early lead, but the 18-year-old Perez rallied in the last three rounds to squeak out the decision. Scoring: referee John Thomas, 97-95, Nolasco; judge Rozadilla, 97-94, Perez; judge Smith, 97-95, Perez. The ring was showered with coins after this one.

Terry Claybon, 131, Los Angeles, won a lopsided unanimous decision over Ruben Proa, 129, National City, six. Proa won only the final round. Terry Smith, referee.

Knockdowns in the second and fourth sessions gave Lonnie Bryant, 118½, San Diego, a majority decision over Manny Livas, also 118½, Canoga Park, five. Scoring: referee Thomas, 47-47; judge Smith, 48-47; judge Rozadilla, 47-46.

Edwin Williams, 138½, Inglewood, TKO'd debuting Gerardo Nava, 137½, Anaheim, at 0:49 of the fourth and final round. Nava did well until floored by a left in the third. A cut by the left optic forced the stoppage. Larry Rozadilla, referee.

CAMACHO-ROACH

SACRAMENTO, CALIF.—Hector Camacho, 137½, romped to a 10-round unanimous decision over Freddie Roach, also 137½, Las Vegas, in his first bout since winning the WBC lightweight title. The 24-year-old Camacho simply outclassed his opponent. He tried for a knockout, but Roach, who never went down, kept plugging all the way.

This bout did not receive complete approval from the press. It was reported that Eddie Futch, the manager of Roach, had advised Freddie to retire and refused to associate himself with the bout. Roach was cut over both brows and on the lip, and failed to win even a single round.

There is no question that Camacho has extraordinary hand speed, among other skills, but, given that he is an undefeated two-time world champion who calls himself "Macho," it is easy to understand why some questioned his lack of punching power. Camacho is now 30-0 with just 16 knockouts.

The only round worth mentioning was the fourth, when Camacho was penalized a point by referee Hank Elespuru for holding and hitting. Judge Rudy Ortega scored the bout 99-89; judge Jack Downey and referee Elespuru both carded 99-90.

"Forget what some people said," the "Macho Man" said after the bout. "He (Roach) fought all out. I'm the hottest fighter around and it was a Christmas present for him to fight me. I guess I'm Santa Claus. I'd like to come back to Sacramento and fight Bobby Chacon. If he can put his private life together, then we could fight. At some point in the year I'd like to meet Aaron Pryor. If Pryor doesn't come back, there'll be someone else. There'll be someone coming up that will make a big fight for me."

Roach, whose record is now 39-10 with 14 knockouts, was impressed, but unawed, by Camacho. "I gave him a better fight than Ramirez did," Roach said. "He caught me a few times, but with nothing that bothered me. I think I proved some people wrong with this fight."

Tony Lopez, 130¾, Sacramento, won a unanimous decision over Adam Garcia, 130, Phoenix, 10.

Tony Baltazar, 142, Los Angeles, halted Darryl Cottrell, 140½, Ogden, Utah, in the second round of their scheduled 10.

Alex Ramos, 158½, Bronx, New York, kayoed J.J. Cottrell, 162, Ogden, Utah, in the first round of another scheduled 10.

Larry Villarreal, 132, Fresno, California, knocked out Tony Talley, 132, Sacramento, in the second round of a scheduled six.

Gabriel Gutierrez, 124, Sacramento, kayoed Tony Cisneros, also 124, Phoenix, in the fifth round of their scheduled six.

Henry Rodriguez, 123, Sacramento, stopped Andres Hernandez, 125½, Sacramento, in the first round of another scheduled six.

Officials—Henry Elespuru, Rudy Ortega, Jack Downey, Robert Smith, Tros Montana.

Site—Arco Arena.

SPINKS-KANE
Vacant Continental Americas Heavyweight Title

NEW YORK, N.Y.—THIS was billed as "The Luck of

The Irish'' vs. ''The Spinks 'Jinx' '' on Friday the 13th. There was no luck involved, however, only skill—or lack of same.

Kevin John Edward (Kip) Kane came into this contest with a record of 15-1-1. His only previous ''name'' opponent was Franco Thomas, who is not exactly a celebrity on the order of Muhammad Ali, Sugar Ray Leonard, or Johnny Carson. Nonetheless, Kane's name was known to fight fans. He had been mentioned as a titular opponent for Larry Holmes before the Easton Assassin's undoing at the hands of Michael Spinks.

The man in the opposite corner, favored Leon Spinks, was on the comeback trail—four straight victories (including a 10-round unanimous decision over the aforementioned Franco Thomas in his last bout) in 1985 after almost a two-year lay-off following a devastating TKO loss to Carlos (Sugar) DeLeon on March 6, 1983.

Spinks, who appears to be gunning for a shot at Dwight Muhammad Qawi's WBA junior heavyweight, came in at 213 for Kane. The excess weight—visible around his middle—slowed him down and took away a good part of his punch. Kane, who knew this was his big chance, charged Spinks in the first round, suffering a right-hand knockdown for his trouble. It turned out to be the only knockdown of the fight.

Kane, 208, Columbus, Ohio, showed heart but little else as he absorbed a beating. Kip actually made Leon look like a boxer, as the elder Spinks brother ducked and countered with an elan that would have done Errol Flynn proud as James J. Corbett in Gentleman Jim.

Referee Joe Cortez finally stopped the scheduled 12-rounder at 1:37 of the eighth. Leon's victory gave him a beautiful belt, courtesy of Marty Cohen of the WBC Continental Americas Championships Committee. (The Continental Americas heavyweight title had been vacated due to Michael Dokes' failure to defend.)

Neon Leon is now 17-4-2 with 11 kayoes. Whether he can lose 23 pounds and beat Muhammad Qawi is difficult to say. His other option is to stay a heavyweight and challenge brother Michael for the title. Maybe they could bill it as the "Battle of the Spinks" and hold it in Giza.

Johnny de la Rosa, 131½, Miami, TKO'd southpaw Al Martino, 130, Washington, D.C., at 2:35 of the 10th and final round. Martino took a licking against the former WBC title challenger, and was floored in rounds seven and 10. Al LoBianco, referee.

Mike Carbone, 151, Levittown, New York, won a split decision over Talso Pearson, 147½, Philadelphia, six. Scoring: George DeGabriel, 5-1, Pearson; Artie Levine and Simon Ramos, both 4-2, Carbone. Al LoBianco, referee.

Joey Solar, 150, Brooklyn, won a split decision over prolific club fighter Mike Tricarico, 150½, New York, six. Scoring: DeGabriel and Ramos, both 4-2, Solar; Levine, 4-2, Tricarico. Paul Field, referee.

Carmine Veneziano, 181½, Brooklyn, TKO'd Tony Rowan, 182½, Phoenixville, Pa., at 2:14 of the second in a scheduled four-rounder. Paul Field, referee.

Muhammad El Rubail, 143, Baghdad, won a unanimous decision over John Kinney, 142, Butler, N.J., four. Scoring: DeGabriel, 4-0; Levine and Ramos, both 3-1. Paul Field, referee.

Lyle Williams, 164½, Brooklyn, TKO'd Ricky Simmons, 166, Dayton, Ohio, at 0:36 of the first round in their scheduled four. Al LoBianco, referee.

KACAR-MUHAMMAD
Vacant IBF Light Heavyweight Title

PESARO, ITALY—SLOBOdan Kacar, 173¾, Yugoslavia, won the vacant International Boxing Federation version of the world light heavyweight title with an upset split decision over former WBA title holder Eddie Mustafa Muhammad, also 173¾, Brooklyn, New York, 15.

Muhammad seemed lethargic in the early rounds, and the busier Kacar built an early lead. The Yugoslav sustained a cut on his forehead in the fourth round from a butt, but kept up his superior work rate.

Mustafa's punches were the harder, and he did land some dangerous looking right crosses. But it just was not enough to win. Muhammad was warned twice in the 11th round for butting by referee Joe Cortez.

The strain of making 175 obviously weakened Eddie, who is not even a shadow of the fighter he was five years ago. The final scoring was as follows: Italian judges Cavalierie and Cosentini, 144-141 and 145-140, respectively, for Kacar; American judge Harold Lederman, 143-141, Muhammad.

Kacar, the second Yugoslav to win a professional world title (Mate Parlov won the WBC light heavyweight crown in 1978), is now 20-0. Muhammad is 46-7-1 with 37 kayoes.

World cruiserweight contender John Odhiambo outscored Welsh champion Aneurin Williams, eight.

Angelo Rottoli, Italy, TKO'd Rick Lainhart, Virginia Beach, in the first session, cruiserweights.

American George Hobbs TKO'd Hassan Magaraobi, Tunisia, in the fifth round, junior middles.

American Kenny Burgess TKO'd Ben Drahim, Tunisia, in round four.

FENECH-COFFEE
IBF Bantamweight Title

SYDNEY, N.S.W.—A CAPAcity house at the Entertainment Centre chanted "Fenech, Fen-ech" through round 15 as local hero Jeff Fenech made his second defense of the Int. Boxing Federation bantamweight title. Party of the other part was American challenger Jerome Coffee, previously unbeaten in 26 professional bouts and loser of only 12 of his 205 amateur encounters.

Fenech, who rose to a world title quicker than anyone in history—winning the IBF championship just six months after he turned pro—passed his biggest test by beating Coffee. There were no knockdowns, but the decision was clear cut. Judge Paul Moore (Australia) had it 148-140; judge Tom McDonough (U.S.) scored 146-141; and judge Eduardo Velasco (Philippines) carded 145-140. The Ring saw it 147-139, Coffee winning rounds nine, 10, and 13 with the first frame even. All the judges, in fact, scored the first round 10-10.

American referee Rudy Battle did not make himself popular with his repeated chanting of "No, no, no" every time there was a clinch. (Coffee did nearly all the holding.) Battle even ordered "break" when Fenech had his hands free and was pounding Coffee. (Jerome was holding at the time.) When Battle broke the boxers—which he did so often—he pushed them arms length apart.

Coffee was by far the best man Fenech had yet met, and Fenech came through like a champion. He not only outfought Coffee, he outboxed him!

Coffee, who helped so much to draw the big gate of well over $300,000 (the exact figure is unknown, but is a record in Australia) with his prefight comments during the two weeks or so he was "down under" prior to the bout, was unstinted in his praise of Fenech after the bout.

"He will hold the title forever. He is strong, tough, and hits hard." Coffee grinned. "But I want to come here again," he added, "run up two or three wins, and then meet Fenech again. I want to take his belt."

Fenech smiled, stood up, loosened the belt holding up his trousers, and said, "That's the only belt you'll get from me."

The bout marked the first time that Fenech had to go the distance, and it was a hard fight. There was no let up in the action, and the crowd thought it was a top contest. Some doubters who said Fenech could not make the bantam limit and be strong over the distance ate their words as he came in at 117. (Coffee weighed 118.) Fenech could have gone 20 rounds at top pace.

Bill Mordey, who has promoted most of Fenech's fights, was impressed with Coffee—not only as a boxer but as a publicity man and personality. Mordey promised to bring Coffee back to Australia for more contests in the future.

Former IBF junior lightweight champion Lester Ellis won a unanimous decision over American Marvin Garris, 10. Scoring: Ray Mitchell, 99-94; Bernie McMahon, 100-93; Max Wark, 96-93. Johnny Wright, referee. A good bout, with Ellis showing flashes of brilliance. Garris moved well, but slapped with his left hand.

Former IBF lightweight champion Charlie (Choo Choo) Brown, 138, won a unanimous decision over fellow American Nick Parker, 136½, 10. Scoring: Ray Mitchell and Max Wark, both 98-92; Bernie McMahon, 100-92. Brian McMahon (twin brother of Bernie), referee. Had its moments, but did not match Ellis-Garris.

Former Australian amateur featherweight champion Shane Knox, 127½, decked aggressive Daryl Cribb, 127, three times for an automatic kayo in 1:53 of the first round in a scheduled eight. Joe Keegan, referee. Tony Rok, Des Bloyd, and Ray Mitchell, judges.

American Kelvin Seabrooks, 122, stopped former Australian amateur champion Rodney Bowman, 123, in the third round of their scheduled eight. Bowman was decked in rounds one, two, and three before referee Tony Rok called a halt. Joe Keegan, Des Bloyd, and Bernie McMahon, judges.

Promoter—Bill Mordey. Attendance—12,074. This was the largest crowd to see a boxing contest in Australia since Lionel Rose defended his world bantamweight title against Alan Rudkin in Kooyong, a suburb of Melbourne, on March 8, 1969. That one drew 14,300.

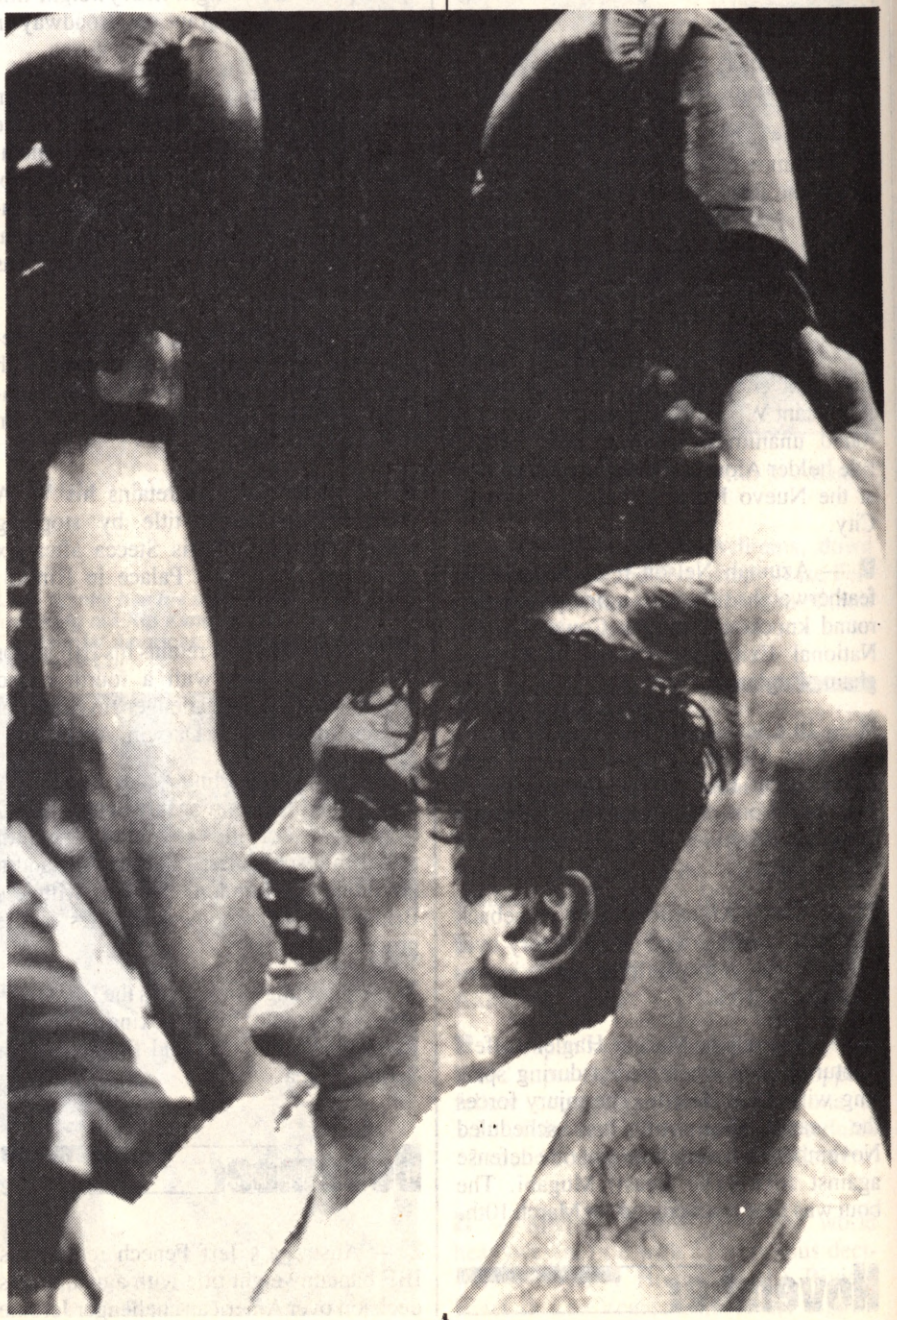
FIGHTER OF THE YEAR

Marvin Hagler And Donald Curry Share Top Honors In '85

by Nigel Collins



Barry McGuigan raises his arms in victory after outpointing Eusebio Pedroza for the WBA featherweight title. The big win earned Barry THE RING's second runner-up slot for 1985's Fighter of the Year.

WHEN PONDERING THE MANY OUTstanding choices for 1985's Fighter of the Year, the editorial staff of The Ring was guided by the following principle: "Between two evils, choose neither; between two goods, choose both." Therefore, for only the fourth time in 58 years, we have decided to share Fighter of the Year honors between two boxers: Marvelous Marvin Hagler and Donald Curry. They also happen to be, probably not so incidentally, boxing's lone undisputed champions.

The task of selecting this year's winner (or in this case, winners) was made even more difficult than normal because there were at least four very strong candidates.

Of course, the most obvious choice was Hagler, whose third round knockout over Thomas Hearns threatened to overshadow every other fistic event of the year. Then there was Curry's magnificent performance against Milton McCrory. The "Lone Star Cobra" was expected to beat the WBC champion in their welterweight unification, but few expected him to do it in such a sensational manner.

But you certainly can't ignore Michael Spinks who, by beating Larry Holmes for the IBF title, made boxing history, becoming the first light heavyweight champion to win the heavyweight crown. And one could hardly forget Barry McGuigan, the WBA featherweight champion who brought joy and newfound hope to Irishmen everywhere by beating the legendary Eusebio Pedroza.

Although others were considered, the elimination process soon reduced the field to the aforementioned quartet. The accomplishments of any of the four would have been more than enough to earn top honors in a year when fewer men had so greatly distinguished themselves. The final selection was based primarily on the fact that Hagler and Curry defeated opponents closer to their fighting prime than Spinks and McGuigan.

Pedroza and Holmes may very well go down in history as far greater fighters than Hearns and McCrory, but in 1985, the latter pair were at the top of their game, fighting as well, if not better, than they ever would. On the other hand, Holmes and Pedroza were a couple of aging icons, several years past their peak.

FOR HAGLER, 1985 WAS A YEAR OF UTter and complete redemption in which he finally achieved fulfillment as a fighter. Although long recognized as perhaps the finest practitioner currently plying the "manly art," Marvin had never before attained the mass adulation he has enjoyed since turning the "Hit Man" into the "Hurt Man" in just over eight minutes of legal mayhem.

Hagler's greatness had sometimes been taken for granted, as more charismatic, and often less talented, fighters hogged the spotlight. Now it is "Marvelous Marvin's" turn to shine. And shine he has. These days, television viewers see more of Hagler's face outside the ring than in. He's been seen joking with Bob Hope, singing a commercial duet with Suzanne Summers, and sparring with Punky Brewster.

While this kind of extra curricular activity has weakened some fighter's resolve, it's hard to begrudge Hagler his season in the sun. He is one of the last champions to come up the hard way. During most of his early years as a pro, Marvin fought in small clubs, off-television, for the kind of money many of today's prima donnas would sneer at. Hagler didn't have any high powered syndicate or Olympic gold behind him. All he had were his skills and determination.

Hagler's been champion for so long now (since September 27, 1980), it's easy to forget that he didn't get his first shot

How THE RING International Ratings are formed: Each month, boxing authorities from all six major continents submit ballots ranking the contenders from 1 to 10 in each of the 13 weight classes. The votes are then weighted with scores of from 10 (for first place) to 1 (for tenth place) and totaled to provide the final standings.

• THE RING Ratings are based on listic merit alone. Every active professional boxer from every country on the globe is eligible to be ranked, regardless of boxing politics or geopolitics.

• THE RING is committed to maintaining the integrity of the rating process and to making these Ratings as up-to-date as possible. In the event that after ballots are submitted, but before the closing date of the magazine, a rated fighter is beaten by or draws with a lower-ranked or unranked fighter, the Editor may, at his discretion, adjust the ballots to reflect that result. Only the two fighters involved in the late bout will be shifted. The positions of the other rated fighters relative to each other will not be changed.

at the title until his 50th professional fight. But you can bet that Marvin hasn't forgotten. In part, it was his long and arduous journey to the top that has enabled him to retain his competitive edge while others, who streaked to championships with relative ease, get soft and fall by the wayside. .

Because of the back and nose injuries that forced postponement of his defense against John (The Beast) Mugabi, we only got one glimpse of Hagler during the past years. However, that one brief but awe-inspiring look was enough to convince us that no matter what any other boxer may have accomplished during the past 12 months, Hagler is second to none.

THE DAY AFTER HAGLER'S SPECTACular victory over Hearns, promoter Bob Arum outlined his plans for an eventual dream fight between Hagler and then WBA welterweight king Curry. First, according to Arum, Curry would unify the 147-pound title. Next would come the junior middleweight belt (a mere formality to Arum's way of thinking), and then it would be on to Hagler and the 160-pound crown. It all sounded very simple, but rather remote. After all, at the time Curry had yet to prove he was the best among the welters. Mentioning him in the same breath with Hagler seemed pretentious, even for a fighter as gifted as Curry. But since Curry's devastating performance against McCrory, a match with the "Marvelous One" has become a realistic proposition for the forseeable future.

If Hagler had suffered in the past for lack of recognition, then Curry was practically an invisible man before squashing McCrory. At least Hagler had his shaven skull and "destruct and destroy" persona going for him. Curry, with his quiet demeanor and yuppie-like image, didn't even look like a fighter. But a fighter is exactly what he is. And a brilliant one at that.

The clinical demolition of McCrory proved what a terribly exciting fighter Curry could be. He had always been highly respected for his skills, but until now his unlimited potential had only been hinted at. He shares this year's Fighter of the Year award, not just for his knockout over McCrory, but because in 1985, Donald represented, along with Hagler, the best boxing had to offer.

FIRST RUNNER-UP: IN MOST YEARS, A fighter (especially a light heavyweight) winning the heavyweight title from an undefeated champion would be a shoo-in for Fighter of the Year. Unfortunately, Michael Spinks pulled off this unprecedented stunner in a year chock full of striking personal accomplishments by a number of fighters. Nevertheless, Spinks' 15-round unanimous decision over Holmes is a record that has earned Spinks his own special place in The Ring Record Book. Even if he never wins another fight (a highly unlikely occurrence, to be sure), Michael will always be esteemed for his precedent-breaking first.

Spinks was able to beat Holmes for two very good reasons: First, he is a talented fighter with enough intelligence and discipline to stick to his well-considered fight plan for the entire 15 rounds. Secondly, Holmes was too old to do anything about it.

Spinks, in what he so aptly described as an "athletic fit," tormented the aging champion with an unorthodox, yet highly effective display of ring skills. Michael, beefed up to a lean and mean 200 pounds with the help of sports nutritionist Mackie Shilstone, used movement and speed to succeed where the likes of George Carpentier, Billy Conn, Gus Lesnevich, Joey Maxim, Archie Moore, John Henry Lewis, and Bob Foster had failed.

SECOND RUNNER-UP: IF THERE IS A boxer on the current scene who threatens to transcend the sport itself and become a truly public figure, it is WBA featherweight boss Barry McGuigan. The hopes of all of Ireland, and of Irishmen around the globe, rode on Barry's skinny shoulders when he challenged the great Eusebio Pedroza for the 126-pound title. McGuigan, fighting with controlled fury, captured the crown before a sell-out crowd of 25,000 hysterical partisans at London's Queens Park Rangers Football Stadium. His unanimous decision victory over the fading but still formidable Panamanian signaled the coming of boxing's newest superstar.

McGuigan is already a hero of almost mythical status in Ireland, where he is given credit for bringing together—at least on the day of his fights—the warring factions inside the troubled Northern portion of the Emerald Isle. His uncompromising fighting style is also a big plus. Even when he's off-form, as in his first defense against Bernard Taylor (KO8), Barry gives it everything he has each and every time he ducks between the ropes. McGuigan's future seems unlimited; his appearance in future Fighter of the Year lists practically assured.

Hector (Macho) Camacho won his second world title in '85, but overall his year was only good enough to earn "Honorable Mention" in THE RING's Fighter of the Year poll.

HONORABLE MENTION: WE WOULD BE amiss to conclude this article without mentioning some of the other fighters who enjoyed admirable years in '85. One who comes immediately to mind is Hector (Macho) Camacho, who won his second world crown this year by soundly outpointing Jose Luis Ramirez for the WBC lightweight title. Camacho is one of boxing's great enigmas. He possesses enough pure talent to become one of the all-time greats. Camacho's main problem is his inconsistency. Although he dazzled Ramirez, Hector was less than macho closing out the year with an unimpressive decision over Freddy Roach in a non-title match. Against the game but ordinary Roach, Camacho ran out of gas in the late rounds, and was even penalized for holding. Yes, Camacho had a good year, but not the great one he is capable of.

Other fighters who had a superb year were Jimmy Paul, who upset Harry Arroyo for the IBF lightweight belt; WBC junior lightweight champion and budding knockout artist Julio Cesar Chavez; Japan's Jiro Watanabe, who continues his stranglehold over the junior bantamweight division; and venerable Mexican warrior Lupe Pintor, who reentered the championship ranks with an intoxicatingly exciting upset over Juan (Kid) Meza for the WBC super bantamweight title. □

FIGHT OF THE YEAR

Marvelous Marvin Hagler KO3 Thomas Hearns

Marvelous Marvin Destroys The Hit Man In Savage Punchout

by Herbert G. Goldman

WE DIDN'T HAVE TO THINK LONG over this one. The less than three-round "war" between defending world middleweight champion Marvelous Marvin Hagler and world junior middleweight champion Thomas Hearns was the "Fight of the Year"—probably the "Fight of the Decade."

Marvin Hagler, the shaven-headed boxer-puncher out of Brockton, Mass., came up the hard way after winning the 1973 National AAU middleweight title. He fought, and beat, everybody—Willie Monroe, Cyclone Hart, Mike Colbert, Kevin Finnegan, Bennie Briscoe, and Sugar Ray Seales, just to name a few. He might have become world champ sooner, but a sense of decency made him stay with his original handlers, Goody and Pat Petronelli. It was not until 1979 that Marvin got his title shot—a fight resulting in a 15-round draw with then champ Vito Antuofermo. Hagler finally won the crown with a third round stoppage of defending title holder Alan Minter at Wembley, but popular recognition—and megabucks purses—still seemed out of reach.

Hagler's stock shot up when Sugar Ray Leonard retired amidst talk of a possible "super fight" between Ray and Marvin. The abortion of Ray's comeback attempt killed plans for that contest, but another super fight took shape on June 15, 1984—when Thomas (Hit Man) Hearns unified the world 154-pound title with a two-round knockout over WBA champion Roberto Duran.

Hearns' own career had reached a sort of anti-climactic dullsville after he was stopped in 14 rounds by Leonard in a 1981 welterweight title unification bout. He beat a few second raters and then won the WBC super welterweight title with a majority decision over Wilfred Benitez in a tactical battle between two all-time greats of the welterweight division. The knockout of Duran, however, put him back on top. "Hagler-Hearns" became the favorite "Who would win?" talk of the fight game—and promoter Bob Arum lost no time in signing the principals.

April 15, 1985 was fight night at Caesars Palace. Hagler vs. Hearns was a scheduled 12-rounder, a fact that little bothered the 15,141 people in attendance at the hotel's outdoor arena. (Hagler's camp said Hearns' camp had demanded 12 rounds instead of the traditional 15.) Hagler was a 7-5 favorite, most of the critics predicting a long fight. Marvin, it was figured, would weather the opening storm and gradually assume command. Almost all of those who saw it as a short fight picked Hearns.

Hagler fooled 'em all.

In a deperation do-or-die bid for public recognition—not to mention victory—Black America's answer to The King And I charged at Hearns. Marvin missed his first swing, but a right hand to the head backed the Motor City Cobra against the ropes. Hagler moved forward, but Hearns caught him with his patented right to the head. This, the same punch that had knocked out Pipino Cuevas in 1980, merely buckled Hagler's knees. In an instant, Marvin had recovered, and was reigning blow after blow after blow.

IBF cruiserweight boss Lee Roy Murphy could have used the help of his trusty six-gun during his titantic battle with Chisanda Mutti. Murphy retained the title with a 12th round knockout in a give-and-take brawl that earned runner-up spot for Fight of the Year.

Hearns was punching, too. There was an incredible amount of leather thrown, but neither man seemed hurt. The champ blocked a lot of Tommy's punches, but Hearns succeeded in opening a large gash on his forehead with what may have been an accidental butt. Hagler's blows seemed harder, but Hearns seemed invulnerable. Not until the second and third rounds would the effects of Hagler's punches show.

The second round was tame compared to that fire-in-the-skies first session. Hagler pressed forward, catching Hearns with a left hook. The Hit Man landed punches, but Marvelous Marvin just walked through them, wobbling Hearns with a left-right combo in the final minute of the session. Tommy was forced to the ropes, where the champ gave him a going over for the remainder of the round.

Hearns smiled weakly as he went to his corner. Early in the round, he'd staggered without being hit. The Hit Man had been hurt, and his best efforts to disguise it were in vain.

Hearns got on his bicycle in round three, flicking jabs and staying out of Hagler's range. The Marvelous One was stalking the challenger when referee Richard Steele stopped the action in order to have Dr. Donald Romeo inspect Hagler's lacerated forehead. Marvin was bleeding, and there was a slight danger that the contest would be stopped. Dr. Romeo inspected the cut and waved the champ back into action.

Back he went! Hagler pulled out all the stops, and threw a vicious right that crashed against Hearns' temple and sent him staggering backwards across the ring. Another right propelled Hearns even further. A left hook missed, but still another hard right landed flush on Hearns' cheek.

Tommy suddenly seemed nothing but arms and legs. Spastically, he dropped on Hagler's shoulder and slid to the floor—flat on his back. If ever a man looked "knocked out," it was Hearns lying on the canvas. After a few seconds, he regained half consciousness, and with a super human effort, made it to his feet at "nine." But he was helpless, and no one protested when Steele looked into his eyes and stopped the bout. The time was 2:01 of the third round.

The "war" was over—one of the greatest fights in boxing history.

Among the great fights of '85 was the 12-round struggle between Lupe Pintor (right) and Juan (Kid) Meza for the WBC super bantamweight title in Mexico City. Pintor won the crown with a unanimous decision following a thrilling punchout.

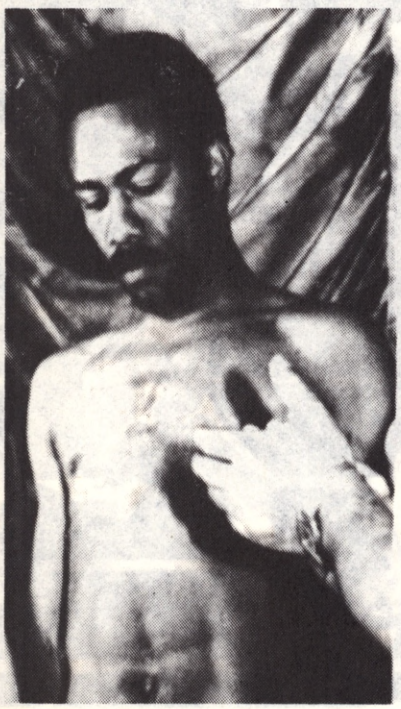
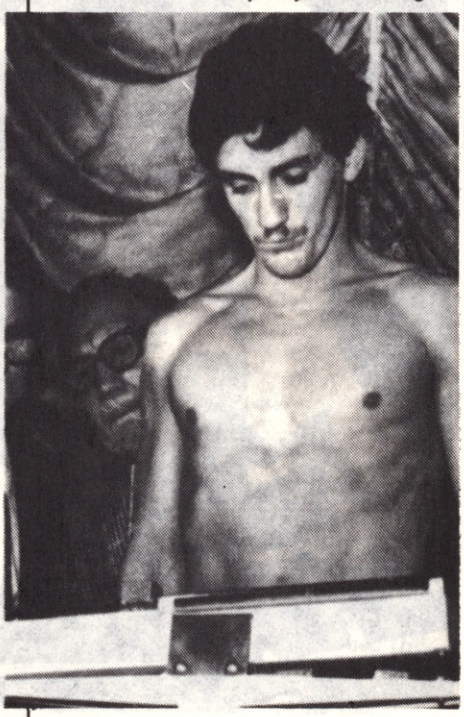
A bloody Ray (Boom Boom) Mancini mixes it up with Livingstone Bramble in a game but losing attempt to recapture the WBA lightweight title. Bramble retained the title with a hard-fought decision in one of 1985's best action fights.





Barry McGuigan (left) and Eusebio Pedroza weigh-in for their match for the WBA featherweight title in London, England. McGuigan won the crown with a unanimous decision in another of the past year's best fights.

RUNNER-UP HONORS GO TO THE great, but unheralded, contest between defending IBF cruiserweight champion Lee Roy Murphy of Chicago and Zambian challenger Chisanda Mutti at Louis II Stadium in Monte Carlo, Monaco, on October 19th. This fight was straight out of Rocky.

Murphy, coming off a lay-off, held his hands too low, and Mutti climbed on top of him in the opening rounds, shaking the champ badly with a right hand in the fourth. It was, in fact, all Mutti through round nine, when a fusillade of blows put the champ down. Murphy was out on his feet, but referee Larry Hazzard let the fight go on.

The turning point came in round 10. Mutti had amazingly punched himself out, and Murphy had shaken off his ring rust. A left hook decked the challenger in the 11th, and both men came out for the 12th round looking for a knockout. At 0:57 of the round, both fighters landed right hands simultaneously—and both went down! Murphy used the ropes to pull himself erect, but Mutti only made it to his knees as Hazzard's count reached "10."

Eat your heart out, Sylvester Stallone!

A VERY HONORABLE MENTION MUST go to the 12-round battle between Lupe Pintor and defending WBC super bantamweight champion Juan (Kid) Meza in Mexico City. Meza had the fight won in the first four rounds, repeatedly catching the ex-WBC bantamweight king with combinations. At the beginning of round five, however, Pintor sent Meza reeling into the ropes with a wicked left-right combination. A follow-up combo to the head dropped Meza, and set the stage for the next seven rounds. At the end of 12, Pintor received his second world crown via a unanimous decision.

Mention must also be made of the heavyweight war between Carl (The Truth) Williams and Jesse Ferguson, finally won by Carl on a 10th round TKO . . . of the great Joe Ruelas-Tommy Cordova battle for the NABF featherweight title, won by Ruelas on a close decision . . . and of Ray Mancini's gallant losing effort against Livingstone Bramble in an effort to regain the WBA lightweight throne.

And didn't Barry McGuigan have his fans on the edge of their seats as he hammered out a unanimous decision over Eusebio Pedroza to win the WBA featherweight title? All in all, a fine, fine year for fights—if not for boxing. □

ROUND OF THE YEAR

HAGLER-HEARNS, FIRST ROUND

"This Was War!" . . .
Marvelous Marvin Hagler

The most exciting three minutes of boxing during 1985 was the first round of the Marvin Hagler-Thomas Hearns showdown in Las Vegas. Hagler (right) won the round on two out of three official scorecards, and went on to stop Hearns in the third.

THERE WAS NO TIME TO TAKE NOTES. For the entire first round of the Marvelous Marvin Hagler-Thomas (Hit Man) Hearns showdown, this reporter stood on his chair in the press section, yelling into a tape recorder. The excitement had been steadily growing for months. This was "The Fight," the one that everybody had been waiting for. And when the first bell finally sounded, it marked the beginning of an uncompromising punchout that now stands among the greatest opening rounds in boxing history.

There was no "feeling out" process. It was "over the top" and straight into the teeth of enemy fire. Hagler was so hyped that Hearns would have needed the "Tommy Gun" he once posed with for a Ring cover photo to stop him. The champion's attack was so ferocious, a lesser man than Hearns would have been blown right out of the ring.

However, Hearns was not about to go down without a fight. As Hagler advanced, the pride of Detroit dug in his heels and fired back with gusto. A right uppercut smashed into Hagler's chin. He wavered for a split second and then resumed his assault. They continued to trade punches at an incredible rate as the capacity crowd of 15,141 filled the air with a deafening roar.

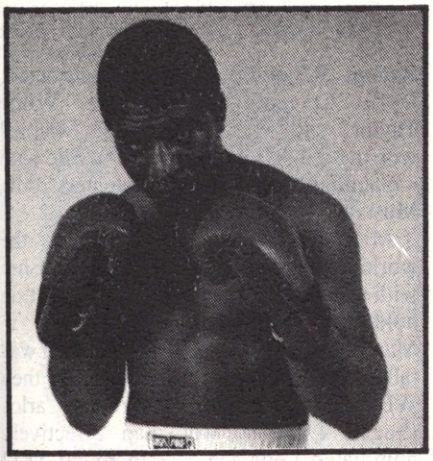
It's not unusual for slugger Tim (TNT) Broady to be in a thriller, but his second-round knockout over Jerome Clouden was especially exciting and ranks high among the year's best rounds.

IBF cruiserweight champion Lee Roy Murphy looks calm and collected in this picture, but he had to come from way behind to defend his belt against Chisanda Mutti in Monte Carlo. The 12th and final round of their epic struggle took runner-up spot in THE RING's Round of the Year category.



According to the Sports Information Data Base, Hearns connected with 56 punches compared with 50 for Hagler. But there seemed to be a big difference in the effect those punches had. While Hearns was jarred by practically every shot Hagler landed, Marvin seemed unfazed by the best Tommy had to offer.

About midway into the round, a large gash appeared on the champion's forehead. It was impossible to tell if it was the result of a butt or a punch, but either way, Hagler wasn't about to let a little blood bother him. Despite the gore running down his face, he kept up his relentless onslaught.

The unbelievable pace continued until the bell finally interrupted what was destined to be the "Round of the Year." While the combatants retired to their respective corners for rest and repairs, the crowd still buzzed with the unparalleled excitement of it all. Even hard-bitten reporters had to admit that they had seldom seen its equal. It had been a special moment—three minutes of unadulterated savagery that will be remembered as long as the sport itself.

RUNNER-UP:

If it hadn't been for the quality and importance of the Hagler-Hearns confrontation, the 12th round of the Lee Roy Murphy-Chrisanda Mutti battle would have garnered top honors. Their thrilling brawl for Murphy's IBF cruiserweight title at Louis II Stadium in Monte Carlo provided one of the most astonishing finishes in modern boxing. Ahead on all three official scorecards, Mutti had practically punched himself out trying to finish off Murphy in the 11th. Then, in the 12th, both warriors landed simultaneous rights to the chin. Just like Rocky Balboa and Apollo Creed in Rocky II, both champion and challenger crashed to the floor, badly hurt. Showing superhuman resiliency, Murphy used the ropes to haul himself to his feet. Mutti, meanwhile, was unable to rise and was counted out by referee Larry Hazzard 1:07 into the round. Wow!

HONORABLE MENTION:

Every year brings hundreds of great rounds. Some of them are fought between fighters in great fights for millions of dollars. Others are fought between faceless boxers in dimly lit clubs for a couple hundred bucks. It would be impossible to mention all of them. But here, with apologies to those left out, are the best of the rest.

The rematch between Livingstone Bramble and Ray (Boom Boom) Mancini for the WBA lightweight title in Reno was as good an encore as boxing produced in '85, and the 15th round was probably the best session of the fight. Mancini, streaming blood from an assortment of facial cuts, took it to Bramble in a last ditch effort to rewin his old crown. Bramble, equally determined to hang onto his belt, punched back with fervor as they stood toe-to-toe until the final bell. While nobody knew for sure at the time, it was also Mancini's last round. Six months later Ray announced his retirement from the ring.

The boxing event of the year in Great Britain was Barry McGuigan's challenge for Eusebio Pedroza's WBA featherweight title in London. The popular Irishman was attempting to beat one of the game's legendary champions. Whether or not he had the punch and skills to accomplish his mission was in doubt until the seventh round. In that session, McGuigan electrified the 25,000 spectators by knocking down Pedroza with a hard right to the jaw. Although the Panamanian was up at the count of three, the die had been cast. McGuigan had the "right stuff" to be a champion. The seventh round had proved it.

Another of '85's sensational rounds came in Pedroza's last successful defense, against local rival Jorge Lujan, the former WBA bantamweight champion. The bout, held in Panama City, was Lujan's last chance for another world title. During the early going, he managed to roll back the clock, taking the action to Pedroza and landing frequent rights to the head of the retreating champion. In the fourth, Pedroza stopped running and engaged Lujan in a savage punchout that ranked among the best of the year. But there were others.

South African fans will long remember then WBA junior heavyweight champion Piet Crous coming off the floor in the third round to TKO challenger Randy Stephens moments later . . . Down in Metairie, La., they had a light heavyweight brawl that saw local favorite Jerome Clouden deck Tim (TNT) Broady in the second round, only to be floored himself for the full count after a vicious give-and-take exchange of haymakers . . . Last, but not least, there was Donald Curry's second round demolition of Milton McCrory. Although it was an admittedly one-sided round, Curry produced two of the hardest punches seen in '85: a left hook and right cross that knocked McCrory into dreamland and established Curry as the best 147-pounder since Sugar Ray Leonard. □

They look friendly enough in this photograph, but WBA lightweight champion Livingstone Bramble (left) and Ray Mancini had just fought 15 bitter rounds when it was taken. It was an excellent fight, with the 15th round being among the best the past year had to offer.

UPSET OF THE YEAR

Michael Spinks W15 Larry Holmes

Spinks Becomes The First Light Heavyweight Champion To Win The Heavyweight Title

Michael Spinks (right) attacks Larry Holmes on his way to winning the IBF heavyweight title in Las Vegas. Spinks' shocking victory also earned him THE RING's "Upset of the Year."

Headlines screamed it: MICHAEL SPINKS BESTS HOLMES!!! It was, without a doubt, the Upset of the Year—probably the most dramatic upset in the history of boxing.

On February 15, 1978, Leon Spinks astounded the boxing world by winning the world heavyweight title with a split decision over the legendary Muhammad Ali in only his eighth pro bout! Ali beat Spinks in a return bout, and Larry Holmes destroyed Leon in three rounds when the elder Spinks brother made a bid for the WBC crown on June 12, 1981.

Brother Michael Spinks was busy in the meantime, picking up a pro career that had grown somewhat stagnant in the interval since his gold medal triumph at the 1976 Olympic Games. On July 18, 1981, following impressive triumphs over Ramon Ronquillo, Murray Sutherland, David Conteh, Yaqui Lopez, Willie Taylor, and Marvin Johnson, Michael won the WBA light heavyweight title with a unanimous decision over talented Eddie Mustafa Muhammad.

Michael Spinks went on to unify the world light heavyweight championship with a unanimous decision over WBC title holder Dwight Muhammad Qawi in March, 1983. As time went on, there was talk of Spinks moving up to challenge then WBC cruiserweight champion Carlos (Sugar) DeLeon, who had effectively humiliated Leon via a sixth round TKO on March 6, 1983.

Talk—spurred by Larry Holmes' increasing appetite for easy victims, Spinks' domination of the light heavyweight division, the shuttling of the WBC cruiserweight title from DeLeon to Alfonzo Ratliff to Bernard Benton, and Michael's unusual (6 ft. 2½ in.) height for a light heavyweight—of a Holmes-M. Spinks title fight began in 1984-85. Sportswriters sneered at the idea as a laughably cruel mismatch. Holmes, it was argued, was making a mockery of his quest for a 50-0 lifetime record—and the sport of boxing.

Michael Spinks thought otherwise. Larry Holmes had been going downhill for some time, and the right man with the right style—on the right night—could accomplish a miracle. Spinks' first task was to become a heavyweight, a job he accomplished with the aid of sports nutritionist Mackie Shilstone. When the time came to weigh in against Holmes, Michael tipped the scales at 199¾—200 as the weights were officially released.

The extra weight was solid muscle, and Spinks seemed anything but sluggish against Holmes. Ducking in and out, he constantly befuddled the Easton Assassin, who looked all over 35 years old. All night long, Holmes looked to land the right hand bomb. But the opportunities vanished as soon as they came. "My right hand don't leave me no more,'' had said a post-World War II Joe Louis. ''I got to think to throw it.'' The same could have been said for Holmes.

When the rosin had settled, and they saw what had occurred (apologies to Ernest Thayer), Spinks was the winner by unanimous decision—two cards at 143-142, the other at 145-142.

Michael Spinks had become the first world light heavyweight champion to succeed in a bid to become the world heavyweight champion. He had also become the first brother of a former world champ to hold a world crown in the same division. On the way, he had stopped Larry Holmes from breaking Rocky Marciano's ''record.'' The loss brought Holmes' career log to a mortal 48-1.

And, just as brother Leon had done in 1978, Michael Spinks had pulled off one of the greatest upsets in the history of boxing. The ''Spinks Jinx'' was back after seven years!

Lonnie Smith rattles defending champion Billy Costello with a left hook to the chin during their battle for the WBC super lightweight title. Smith knocked out Costello in the eighth round in one of 1985's biggest upsets.

RUNNER-UP:

The bout in which Denver's ''Lightning Lonnie'' Smith took the WBC super lightweight title from Bill Costello in New York's Madison Square Garden on August 21, 1985 was a shoo-in for the runner-up spot. Smith, 21-0-1 going into the fight, was ranked ninth by the WBC and nowhere by The Ring. And with good reason. The names in his record were no bigger than Frank Montgomery, Todd Longmuir, Forrest Winchester, and Joey Soler. Costello, on the other hand, had beaten men like Willie Rodriguez, Bruce Curry, Ronnie Shields, Saoul Mamby, and Leroy Haley in compiling a 30-0 record. Smith, however, showed great speed and a sharp boxing intellect worthy of a Jersey Joe Walcott. the result was a knockout victory in 2:31 of the eighth round. The 3,847 people in attendance (a financial disaster for the Colorado-based Lightning Bolt Productions, Inc.) witnessed a superb performance—and a memorable upset.

HONORABLE MENTION:

Honorable mention must go to the Jimmy Paul-Harry Arroyo IBF lightweight title fight, in which the Detroit-based Paul won a convincing unanimous decision over the favored defending champion. Alfonzo Ratliff's WBC cruiserweight title winning split decision over Carlos (Sugar) DeLeon, Bernard Benton's unanimous points win over Ratliff for the same crown later in the year, and middleweight Robbie Sims' 10-round verdict over Doug DeWitt rounded out the year's major upsets. □

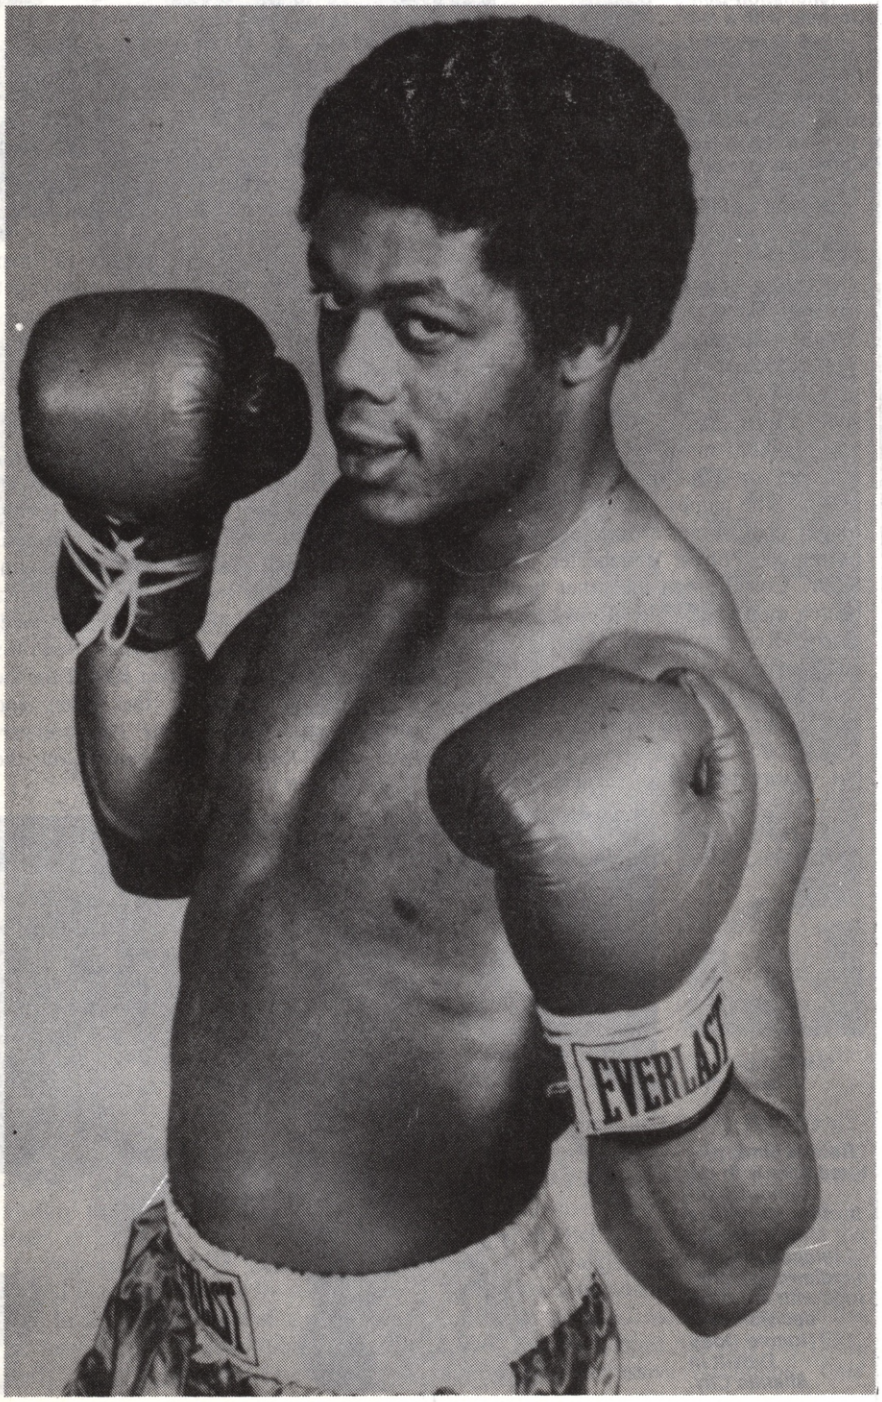
Robbie Sims, pictured here with his famous half-brother Marvelous Marvin Hagler, jumped into the middleweight rankings with an upset decision over touted Doug DeWitt in Atlantic City.

MOST PROGRESS

"Lightnin' Lonnie" Smith

From Obscurity
To World Champion



"Lightnin' Lonnie" Smith came out of nowhere to win the WBC super lightweight title and also earn THE RING's Most Progress of 1985 award.

Harlan Alonzo Smith, better known as "Lightnin' Lonnie" Smith, the WBC super lightweight (junior welterweight) champion, wins this The Ring "Most Progress" designation for 1985. Like Carlos Monzon when he won the world middleweight title by knocking out Nino Benvenuti at the Palazzo dello Sport in Rome on November 7, 1970, Smith was unranked at the time he won his crown.

Lonnie Smith, born in Pueblo, Colorado on November 25, 1962, compiled a 94-3 log as an amateur before turning pro with a two-round kayo over Daniel Munoz in Las Vegas on August 8, 1980. Six more victories over "no names" were followed by a six-round draw with Terry Butler on August 9, 1981 in Cleveland. That is the only blemish on Smith's log to date.

The following year saw Lonnie win seven more bouts, defeating Dennis Shea, Carl Williams, C.B. Brown, Nate Stewart, Gene Ellington, Bobby Jones, and Vic Flores. It looked like Smith was on his way, but managerial difficulties kept him on the sidelines throughout 1983.

Lonnie returned to action with an eight-round points win over Thomas Baker in Atlantic City on January 14, 1984. Smith's first 10-rounder came just six weeks later—a onesided unanimous decision over Forrest Winchester at Resorts Internatioal Hotel in A.C.

Three more bouts—a 10-round decision over Danny (Bronco) Sanchez in Atlantic City that Smith took on five days' notice, an eight-round stoppage of Todd Longmuir, and a ninth round kayo over Thomas Baker in a return bout, led into a 12-round contest for the vacant ESPN junior welterweight title against Frank Montgomery.

The bout, at Resorts Int. on October 4, 1984, saw Smith win another lopsided unanimous decision. J.R. Jowett, who reported for The Ring, commented on Lonnie's "imagination," a word that has been stressed in many stories about Smith.

A 10-round points win over Joey Soler in Atlantic City on May 21, 1985 was Lonnie's next bout. Smith was now the WBC's ninth ranked super lightweight contender, but he was totally unknown to all but the most rabid of boxing fans—something Lightning Bolt Productions did not fully grasp when they rented out Madison Square Garden for Lonnie's scheduled 12-round WBC title bout with defending champion Bill Costello on August 21st.

"I really think the fight will be onesided—all me," said Smith before the fight. "I know exactly what it takes to beat him. I know his weaknesses. He's never fought anyone with any real speed and I'm the fastest super lightweight in the world. He won't be able to deal with it. I'm much too fast for him and I'm much too slick for him.

"My style of fighting is punches in bunches and bunches of punches. If the first punch doesn't get you, there'll be another one right behind it that will."

Smith totally confused Costello with styles ranging from "faster than a speeding bullet" to a fantastic imitation of comedian Stepin Fetchit. The fight see-sawed, but the rounds that Smith won were by two- or three-point margins—often punctuated by knockdowns. A final right hand knocked Costello out in the eighth round.

The promotion lost a ton of money, with a total attendance of only 3,847. Smith, nevertheless, had shown the boxing world a combination of speed, intelligence, knowledge, and imagination seldom seen in the 1980s.

Lonnie Smith's emergence from relative obscurity to the WBC 140-pound throne certainly deserves the accolade "Most Progress." He always had the goods, but 1985 was the year he put them on display in the big market.

RUNNER-UP:

J.B. Williamson's upset 12-round verdict over Prince Mamah Mohammad for the vacant WBC light heavyweight title earns him the runner-up spot in the "Most Progress" sweepstakes. Almost totally unknown—except to California fight fans—Williamson entered the Inglewood Forum ring on December 10th with a record of 21-1, his lone loss coming against Alex Ramos in Atlantic City on May 1, 1983. Toughened by wars with Grover Robinson, Pete McIntyre, and others, Williamson gave the favored Mohammad the surprise of his life. If that upset wasn't progress, then what is?

HONORABLE MENTION:

Honorable mentions go to Myung-Woo Yuh, who sprang out of what seemed like nowhere to win the WBA junior flyweight title from Joey Olivo in his native Korea, and Jeff Fenech, the former Australian amateur star who won the IBF bantamweight title in his seventh pro bout. Well done, young gentlemen. Well done. □

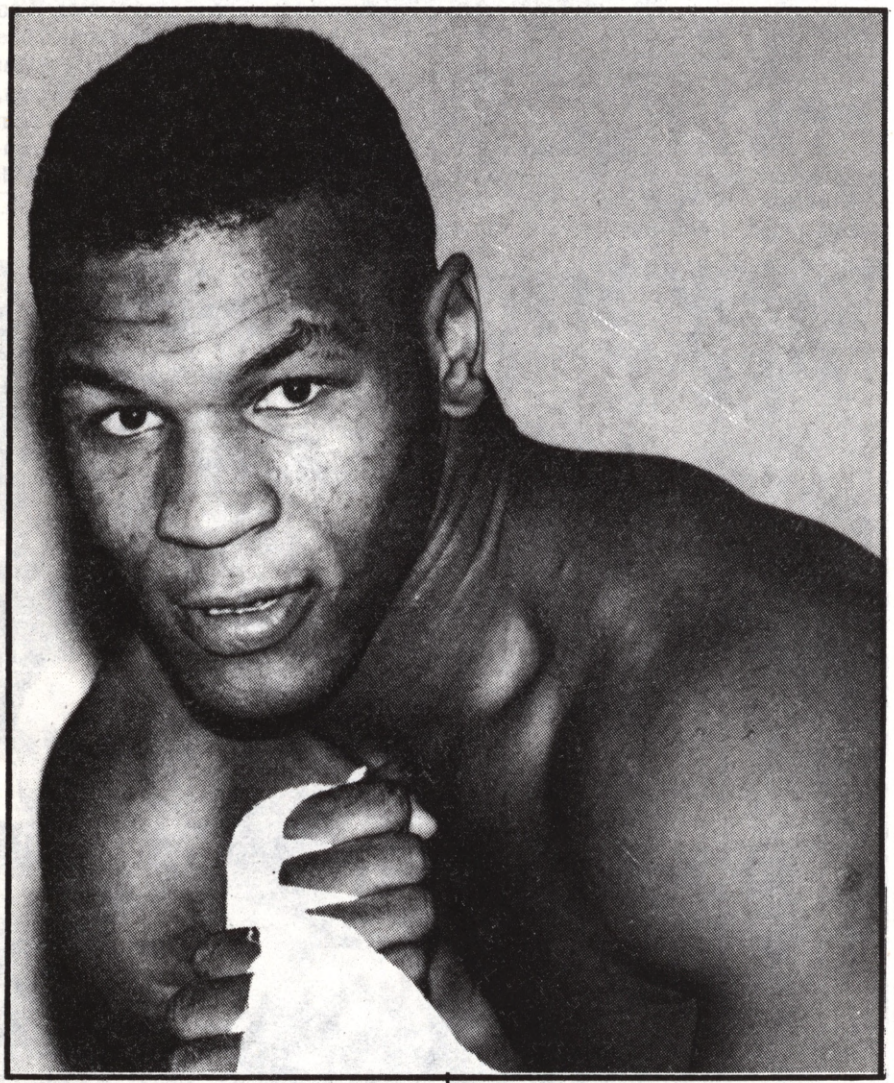
PROSPECT OF THE YEAR

Mike Tyson

Teen-Age Knockout Artist Leads
Parade Of Talented Newcomers



Mike Tyson

TALK ABOUT HAVING A GREAT rookie year!

Although he only turned pro in March of 1985, heavyweight Mike Tyson made such an impact on the boxing world that he's already been featured on the cover of The Ring. In less than 12 months, the 19-year-old Tyson has streaked to 15 consecutive knockouts, 11 of them in the opening round.

Tyson is off to the fastest start of any heavyweight in recent memory. His breakneck pace has even the most cynical railbirds sitting up and taking notice. And while many other fine young boxers came into their own during the past 12 months, their accomplishments paled in comparison. Mike enjoyed the kind of inaugural year that dreams are made of.

Tyson's life and mercurial rise to prominence were detailed in last month's cover story. But since that issue (February '86) went to press, he has racked up two more quick wins, icing both Sammy Scaff (in Mike's New York City debut) and Mark Young inside the first round.

Because Tyson has yet to face anyone even remotely close to world class, questions remain in a number of important areas. Sure, Mike can punch. Nobody would be foolish enough to deny that. But can he take a major league punch? Will he fall apart the first time an opponent refuses to fold under his awesome attack? Or even more intriguing: Where will Tyson's murderous punching take him by this time next year?

Although Tyson's spectacular tear made him our unanimous choice for 1985's Prospect of the Year, there were plenty of other boxers who enlivened 1985 and gave us something to look forward to in '86.

FIRST RUNNER-UP:

Just how good is undefeated middleweight prospect Michael Nunn? Well, good enough for promoter Bob Arum to sign him to a two-year contract worth more than $250,000. Not bad for a 22-year old who had to settle for an alternate's berth on the 1984 U.S. Olympic boxing team.

Nunn, from North Hollywood, had his first pro bout in '84, but it was in '85 that he began to make headlines. Fighting in California and Nevada, Nunn tallied 10 straight wins to bring his oveall log to 11-0, eight by knockout. The 6-foot-2 Nunn is a well-schooled, standup boxer with decent, though hardly devastating, power.

A member of Dan Goossen's Ten Goose stable, Nunn is being carefully groomed. Although he almost ran out of gas outpointing the always rugged Jorge Amparo over eight rounds, the next time out, Michael went 10 strong rounds to a unanimous decision over Billy Robinson.

SECOND RUNNER-UP:

Although 27-year-old light heavyweight Poncho Carter has been pushing leather professionally since March of 1984, nobody paid much attention to the vicious-puncher from Augusta, Georgia until this past year when he hooked up with Mrs. Josephine Abercrombie's Houston Boxing Association.

While he got off to a relatively late start as a pro, Carter has displayed the kind of punching power that can quickly vault a fighter into the limelight. Through the end of '85, Poncho has recorded 15 straight victories, 14 via the quick route. He hasn't been knocking over stiffs either. Among his victims the past year have been Willie Taylor (KO3), Jay Strickland (KO2), Tony Nelson (KO2) and Keith Vining (KO2).

As an amateur, Poncho was stopped a few times, but so far, his chin has shown no weakness in pro punchouts. Now that Michael Spinks has moved up to win the IBF heavyweight title, the light heavyweight division is in desperate need of a new star. Poncho Carter just might be the man to fill the void.

THIRD RUNNER-UP:

Puerto Rican lightweight Sammy Fuentes came out of nowhere in 1985 to upset former IBF champion Harry Arroyo with a seventh round TKO. A pro since late 1982, Fuentes' place in the overall picture is difficult to ascertain. He burst on the scene so suddenly that while he is already rated among the top 135-pounders in the world, because of his limited exposure and number of fights (11-1, seven knockouts), he also qualifies as a prospect. However, the coming year should reveal whether Fuentes is a bonafide threat to the lightweight crown, or just another flash in the pan.

FOURTH RUNNER-UP:

New Yorker John Wesley Meekins is another hotshot who garnered a lot of attention in '85. A quick-handed junior welterweight whose deadly combinations and boxing skills have carried him to a 9-0-1 (eight kayoes) record, Meekins is high on Bob Arum's "can't miss" list. In fact, Top Rank's head honcho went as far as calling Meekins the "next Donald Curry." While we won't go quite that far in singing John's praises, he is definitely worth keeping an eye on as 1986 unfolds.

FIFTH RUNNER-UP:

While former heavyweight champ Smokin' Joe Frazier has had his problems with some of the assorted relatives populating his Philadelphia-based stable, he may have come up with his best prospect from outside of the Frazier clan. We are speaking of undefeated cruiserweight Bert Cooper. Cooper is one of those fighters who throw caution to the wind, letting it all hang out in an all-out attempt for a knockout. So far, Bert's free-swinging brand of mayhem has been highly successful. He has recorded 10 wins, nine inside the distance.

HONORABLE MENTION:

There were plenty of other promising fighters who began to make their presence felt during 1985. Although there is not enough space to give credit to all of them, here, in no particular order, are a few more newcomers worthy of note.

Manager Leslie Bonano, who is largely responsible for the rebirth of boxing in New Orleans, has several youngsters on the move. Among his best bets for future stardom are lightweight John Duplessis, 19 (16-0, 12 kayoes), welterweight Darren Van Horne, 17 (20-0, 16 kayoes), and Paul Whittaker, 22 (14-0, 14 kayoes).

California, long the breeding ground for good "little men," came up with undefeated heavyweight prospect Avery Rawls. In a more traditional vein, featherweight Hector Lopez and flyweight Ricky Romero both came on strong in '85.

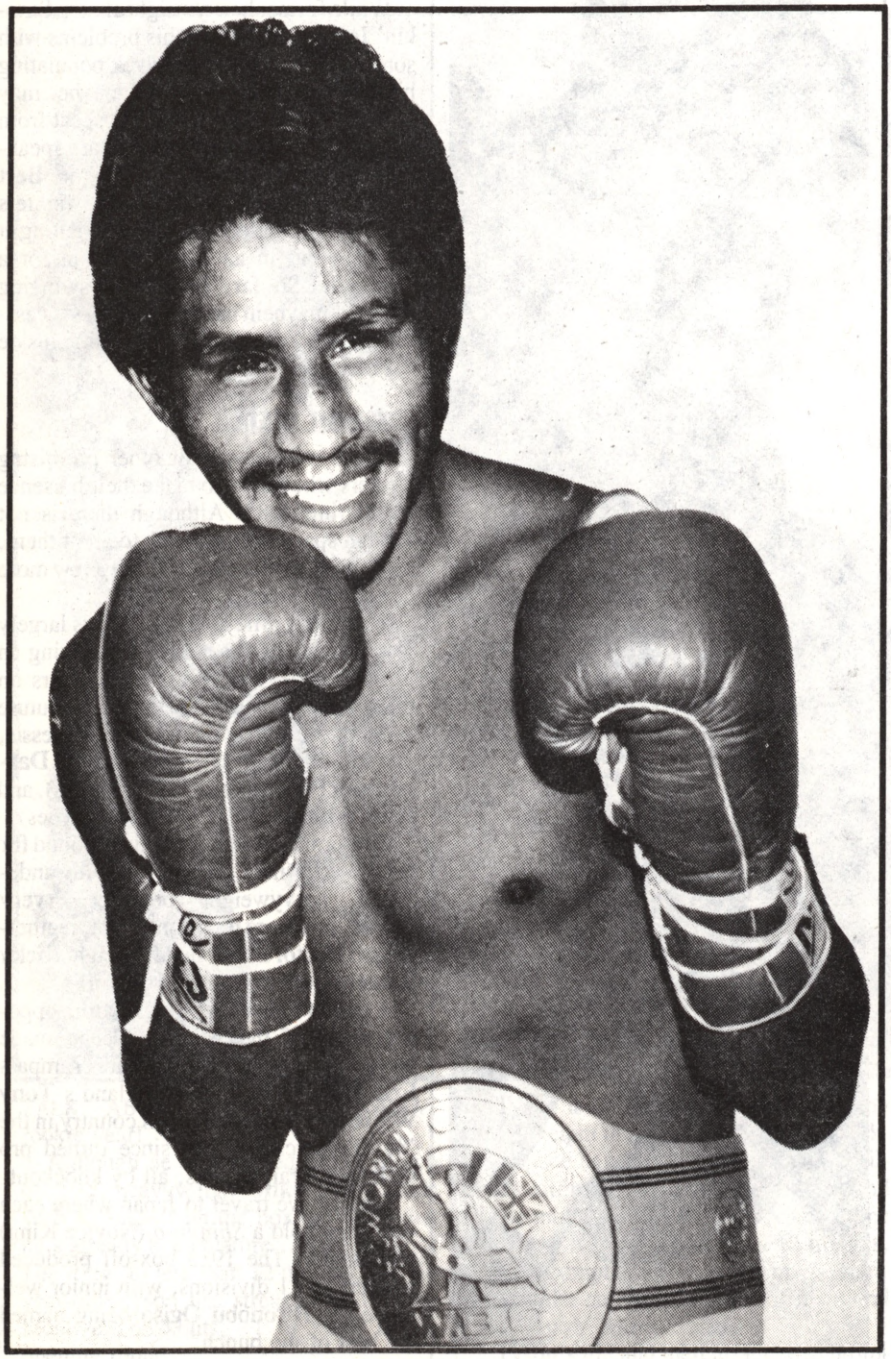
A pair of light heavyweights from opposite sides of the Atlantic Ocean made waves the past year. They are Tampa's Eric Holley (13-0) and England's Tony Willis, who represented his country in the '84 Olympics and has since turned pro with four straight wins, all by knockout.

Finally, we travel to Japan where each year they hold a Shinjin-o (Novice King) tournament. The 1985 box-off produced winners in 11 divisions, with junior welterweight Hironobu Ogiso being named the best of the bunch. □

COMEBACK OF THE YEAR

Lupe Pintor

Mexican Hero Back From The Brink Of Oblivion To Win Second World Title



A champion again and winner of THE RING's Comeback of the Year award is Mexican legend Lupe Pintor, who outpointed Juan (Kid) Meza for the WBC super bantamweight crown in '85.

1985 CERTAINLY DIDN'T GET OFF TO A very auspicious start for Lupe Pintor. In his first match of the year, the former WBC bantamweight champion was badly battered by Adrian Arreola, retiring in his corner at the end of the seventh round. It looked like the end of the line.

Pintor's gradual slide into fistic oblivion began back in 1982 when he failed in a gallant bid for the WBC super bantamweight title against Wilfredo Gomez. Shortly after his 14th round TKO loss to Gomez, while still the 118-pound title holder, Lupe was seriously injured in a motor accident. His jaw was shattered and many observers felt he would never fight again. But fight he did.

The WBC had stripped Pintor of his belt during his lengthy convalescence, but Lupe's fans remained loyal and turned out in force when he returned to action with a pair of modest wins in '84. Then came the nasty beating from Arreola. Lupe was written off as just another ex-champ who had hung on too long for his own good.

But inside the breast of this little man from Cuajimalpa beat the heart of a lion. Forced to fight on because of financial difficulties, Pintor wangled a shot at Juan (Kid) Meza's WBC super bantamweight title. The fight, held in Mexico City, turned out to be one of the year's best. After falling badly behind, Pinor rallied in the fifth, dropping Meza twice.

However, Meza, who had endured many lean years prior to winning the title from Jaime Garza, wasn't about to give up his crown without a struggle. The tide of battle took several more turns before Lupe prevailed, flooring Meza again in the 10th to cement his triumph.

The amazing comeback victory placed Pintor with Ruben Olivares and Freddie Castillo as the only three Mexicans to win world titles in two different weight classes. It also earned him The Ring's 1985 Comeback of the Year. But nothing lasts forever. In the waning days of '85, Pintor was stopped in the 10th round of an overthe-weight match with Billy White.

Will he come back again?

FIRST RUNNER-UP:

Another ex-champ who rejoined the championship circle in '85 was Dwight Muhammad Qawi, who knocked out local hero Piet Crous in Sun City, Bophuthatswana (South Africa) to capture the WBA junior heavyweight title.

Qawi had been treading water since losing his WBC light heavyweight crown to Michael Spinks in their 1983 unification bout. The "Camden Buzzsaw" continued to win, but he seemed uninspired, merely going through the motions. But when the opportunity came to fight Crous, Qawi rose to the challenge, both literally and figuratively, blasting out Crous in a manner reminiscent of prime time Buzzsaw.

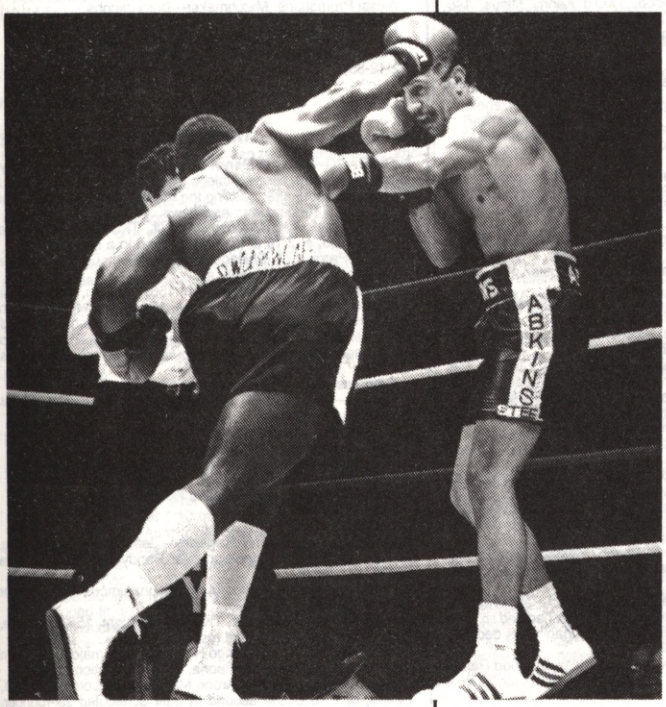
SECOND RUNNER-UP:

At the start of 1985, Australian veteran Barry Michael was considered a solid pro who never quite made it to the top. He still won the vast majority of his bouts, but a world title seemed a remote dream at best. Nevertheless, an interesting situation developed when fellow Australian Lester Ellis won the IBF junior lightweight title, setting up a natural grudge match between the pair. Michael, the British Commonwealth lightweight champion at the time, shed five pounds and upset his young rival to win the IBF crown at age 30. Before the year was over, Michael had already made his first defense, stopping Korean Jin-Sik Choi in four rounds. Not bad for a graybeard who never figured to win a world title in the first place.

HONORABLE MENTION:

I don't know how the old cliché "they never come back" got started, but it certainly didn't apply to boxing in 1985. Let's take a look at a few more outstanding examples of fighters who turned their careers around during the past year.

Panamanian Hilario Zapata, twice holder of the WBC light flyweight title, won his third world championship by outpointing Alonzo (Strongbow) Gonzalez for the vacant WBA flyweight crown in Panama City.



Dwight Muhammad Qawi also rejoined the championship circle in '85, winning the WBA junior heavyweight belt from Piet Crous. Qawi is pictured here going over the top with a right hand on his way to a 10th round knockout over Crous in Sun City.

Welterweight contender Marlon Starling put the "star" back in his name in '85 with a victory over previously undefeated Simon Brown.

Welterweight Marlon Starling lost two out of three in '84. One, to Donald Curry, was nothing to be ashamed of, but when the "Magic Man" dropped a 12-round duke and the NABF title to Pedro Vilella, he looked finished as a top-class fighter. Following a lay-off, Starling returned to action with new vigor, capping the year with a splendid decision over previously unbeaten and highly ranked Simon Brown.

Although his 15-round points win over Rocky Lockridge for the WBA junior lightweight title was one of the year's most controversial decisions, Wilfredo Gomez has to be given credit for making the valiant stretch drive that allowed him to capture (some say "steal") his third world title. The fact that Gomez had been badly beaten by Azumah nelson in their 1984 match for the WBC featherweight title makes Wilfredo's comeback even more remarkable.

Other fighters who rejuvenated their sagging careers in '85 were: middleweight John Collins, who iced Mark Holmes in two rounds to win new respect and the USBA title; Ubaldo Sacco, who won the WBA junior welterweight championship, stopping Gene (Mad Dog) Hatcher in a rematch of their '84 donneybrook; and club-fighting welter Allen Braswell, who turned from "opponent" to "dangerman" with a few well-placed wins. There are others, of course, too numerous to mention. But suffice to say, fighters do come back. 1985 proved it! □

▶INGLEWOOD—Forum—Manning Galloway, 147, Columbus, Ohio, won The Forum welterweight championship with a unanimous 12 round decision over Dio Colome, 147, Hawthorne. Galloway (38-3-1) easily outboxed the slower Colome (19-3), who missed with most of his punches. The scores of referee Pat Connolly (116-114) and judges Gwen Farrell (115-113) and Lou Filippo (117-111) were surprisingly close.

Hard hitting Lindell Holmes, 160, Detroit, advanced in The Forum's middleweight tournament by stopping previously unbeaten Jack Padia, 158, Penngrove, in the sixth of a scheduled 10. Ringside physician Dr. Bernhart Schwartz stopped the fight at the end of the round with blood pouring from the right eye of Padia. Padia (19-1) was down in the second from a left hook, and was cut in the third. He courageously battled back to trail by just one point on two cards and lead by a point on a third. Filippo, referee.

Lucky Cruz was floored in the first and second and was only one punch away from a knockout defeat when he was cut over the left eye by an unintentional butt. Delgado, referee.

▶LOS ANGELES—Olympic Auditorium—WBC super featherweight champion Julio Cesar Chavez, 135½, Culiacan, Mexico, won a technical decision over Jeff Bumpus, 135½, Elkhart, Indiana, at 1:19 of the fifth round a scheduled non-title 10. Chavez (47-0) was ahead (40-37, 40-36, 40-36) on all three scorecards when he was cut on the left eyelid by a head butt. The very tough southpaw Bumpus (20-4) was never in any trouble and scored solidly with lefts in every round. Dr. James Jen-Kin, referee.

Oscar Bejines, 132, Guadalajara, was a lopsided unanimous points winner over Mario Miranda., 132, Barranquila, Colombia, 10. Miranda, now fighting out of Miami, ran and threw very few punches. Bejines floored him in the final minute of the tenth. Scoring: referee Lou Moret, 99-90; judge Gwen Farrell, 100-90; judge Chuck Hassett, 97-93.

Hector Lopez, 128, Glendale, floored Felipe Olivar, 128½, Tijuana, twice for a knockout in 1:04 of the second round in a scheduled eight. Robert Byrd, referee.

Angel Hernandez, 129, Guadalajara, won a unanimous decision over 100-fight veteran Juan Antonio Lopez, 130 Culiacan, in an action packed 10 which drew a standing ovation and a shower of coins. Hernandez threw hundreds of punches in every round. Scoring: referee Hassett, 96-93; judge Jen-Kin, 95-94; judge Farrell, 99-90.

Carlos Manzan, 120, San Pedro, won a unanimous decision over very brave Genaro Espitia, 120, North Hollywood, in a six which drew even a larger shower than Hernandez-Lopez. Espitia takes a lot of punishment, but is all heart. Scoring: referee Moret, 59-55; judge Farrell, 58-56; judge Jen-Kin, 59-55.

▶ORANGE—Our Lady of the Valley Arena—The misapplication of a rule robbed Carlos Hernandez of what should have been an outstanding victory over Marc Fichtner for the vacant state cruiser title. Slimmed down to 193¼, the formerly cumbersome Union City heavyweight showed surprising movement and an ever-present jab to completely befuddle Fichtner, 192, Boonton. Marc showed nothing but courage, as he took a torturous beating, one eye cut, the other closed, and a visit to the canvas in the second. When Fichtner was unable to come out for the third round of a scheduled 12, fans thought it a TKO win for Carlos. But after a disturbing huddle among the commission staff, it was ruled Marc had been cut by an unintentional butt, and the bout was declared a technical draw. Referee Vinnie Rainone was remiss in ruling Fichtner's inability to continue was solely the result of the butt, as he was being eaten alive, cuts or no. A rule meant to protect against capricious losses ended up saving a loser if ever there was one, while sadly depriving Hernandez of a fine victory.

In a tedious chess match, Luigi Camputaro, 119½, Caserta, Italy, via Southington, Conn., edged Juan Muriel, 121, New York, by a close but unanimous verdict, eight. Randy Neumann, referee.

Clarence Coleman, 142½, Newark, cut up and TKO'd mauler Jesus Velez, 146, Dover, at 1:41 of the fourth round in an unpleasing six. Vinnie Rainone, referee.

Improving Jehan Pierre Vassau, 173½, Morristown, dropped crude but game Carmine Veneziano, 181¾, Monroe, N.Y., in the third, then survived a rocky fourth to gain a unanimous win in a thrilling four. Randy Neumann, referee.

Ray Brewer, 159¼, Paterson, kayoed John Tizio, 163, Orange, in 0:45 of the fourth and final round. Vinnie Rainone, referee.

Bob Wasielewski, 164½, Bayonne, dropped Greg Jones, 157, Newark, in the first, then battled him to exhaustion for a TKO at 1:35 of the third round in their scheduled four. Vinnie Neumann, referee.

Junior featherweight contender Harold Petty scored an easy win over Nelson Rodriguez Ortiz in Atlantic City.

▶ATLANTIC CITY—Tropicana Hotel Casino—Harold Petty, 122¾, St. Louis, kept busy with a fairly tame win over Nelson Rodriguez Ortiz, 123¾, Barranquitas, P.R., 10. A knockabout Caribbean club fighter with an undistinguished record, Rodriguez still managed to hold Petty even in the early going. But the cream rose to the top, as Petty took complete command in later rounds, though the Puerto Rican stayed in the action and wasn't disgraced. Scoring unanimous: Milo Savage, 8-1-1; Eva Shain and William Kostrub, both 8-2. Rudy Battle refereed. "Some people think you only learn things in the early fights," explained the winner. "I like to think I learn something in each one."

Rocky Young, 130¼, Moundsville, W. Va., outhustled Richard Ishmael, 129¾, Houston, in the early going, then survived a counterpunching lesson to hold onto a close, disputed unanimous decision, eight. Joe O'Neil, referee.

In a battle of cuties, Randy Richardson, 133, Youngstown, dropped Na'eem Muhammed, 130½, Orange, N.J., with a surprise left hook in the second, survived a closing eye in the mid rounds, then floored Na'eem again when he lunged into the same punch in the fifth, to score a unanimous win, six. Rudy Battle, referee.

Esau Staley, 143¾, Trenton, dropped Rafael Terrero, 143¾, Union City, N.J., in the first, and took a unanimous verdict in a bristling four. Joe O'Neil, referee.

Unheralded Kevin Watts upset veteran tough guy Dwight (Tiger) Walker via a majority 10-round decision in Atlantic City.

▶ATLANTIC CITY—Tropicana Hotel Casino—Confounding the "experts" who thought he might be thrown to the wolves, Pleasantville youngster Kevin (Kilo) Watts, 159¼, made a quantum leap to main-event status and won a majority decision over experienced Dwight (Tiger) Walker, 157, Newark via Philadelphia, 10. A roughhouse mauler with few clean head shots, the bout substituted drama for action, and managed to entertain nonetheless.

Walker concentrated almost entirely on the body, yet found the wispy-looking Watts more than a physical match on the inside. Crediting his manhandling skills to a high school wrestling carreer, Kevin was able to smother most of Tiger's grunting body blows. Watts landed enough head shots when he could get some room to edge most of the rounds. The ineffectiveness of Walker's body attack was evidenced by Kevin's having his best rounds late, when he would be expected to tire. The scoring, though getting a mixed greeting, was just: Joe Pasquale, 6-3-1; Rich Strange, 7-2-1; Eugene Grant, 5-5. Tony Orlando refereed.

A.D. Wiggins, 137, Allentown, scored an upset TKO over Joey Starr, 132¼, Chicago, at 2:08 of the sixth round in a scheduled eight. A mechanical, standup boxer, Starr couldn't adjust to A.D.'s loose-hipped style, and was twice decked by overhand rights. Paul Venti, referee.

Tony Martin, 138½, St. Louis via Philadelphia, won a split verdict over Alberto Quinones, 141¾, New York, six. The touted Martin showed lapses of concentration that allowed a determined Quinones to make it closer than it should have been. Paul Venti, referee.

Lawrence Cheatham, 111½, Philadelphia, avenged a bad-call draw with a solid, unanimous beating of game Keith Jenkins, 119½, Philadelphia, six. Tony Orlando, referee.

In a wild shootout, Carmine Veneziano, 185¾, Monroe, N.Y., came off the floor twice in the first to wear out Wayne Perdue, 199, Atlantic City. Perdue was dropped and took a standing eight in the third, and then was unable to come out for the fourth and final round. Paul Venti, referee.

Promoter/matchmaker—Don Elbaum, Ted Menas.
Attendance—1,200 (estimated).

▶ATLANTIC CITY—Tropicana Hotel Casino—In a clear sign of the times, top contender Tommy Ayers continues to tread water against non-descript opposition while waiting for a title shot to open up. He stated before the fight, "There's no reason for me to be in a hurry. Sooner or later, it's got to be my time to shine." But he certainly takes no risks while passing time. Opportunism precludes preparation. Ayers, 150, Cincinnatti, proceeded to kayo journeyman Dexter Smith, 151½, Miami, in 2:04 of the third round in a scheduled 10. A slow starter, Tommy was almost embarrassed in the opening rounds. A left uppercut jolted him in the first, but, in the third, Smith missed a right and was countered by a thunderous left hook that swept him off his feet and deposited him on his face—out cold. "I've gotten the most out of fights where I've had a tough time," the winner admitted, while continuing to ignore his own advice. Joe Cortez refereed.

Making an ill-advised comeback, Freddie Spry, 167, Peekskill, N.Y., showed nothing, and was belted out by spoiler Steve Johnson, 157, Philadelphia, getting dropped twice and TKO'd at 1:49 of the third round in a scheduled eight. Ted Pick, referee.

Howard Stewart, 142½, Philadelphia, took a unanimous verdict over Walter Houston, 152¾, Staten Island, in a rugged six. Joe Cortez, referee.

In a battle of lefties, Jonathan (Bilal-ski) Bacote, 139, East Orange, edged Mike Duzant, 143, Staten Island, by majority decision, four. Ted Pick, referee.

Talso (Sugarbear) Person, 149¼, Philadelphia, ripped up the body of George Ross, 148, Williamsport, Pa., who quit in his corner after one of four. Ted Pick, referee.

Joe Luis Manley celebrates his one-sided decision over Frank Montgomery.

▶ATLANTIC CITY—Atlantis Hotel & Casino—Joe Louis Manley, 143, Detroit, crafted a near-shutout over late sub Frank (The Silk) Montgomery, 142, Philadelphia, in a lively, even if one-sided, 10. It was vintage Manley: sharp hands, slick boxing, and flashes of brilliance, undermined by showboating, lapses in concentration, and a "killer instinct" right from "Mr. Rogers' Neighborhood". Montgomery, a smooth but mechanical standup boxer, who has had trouble emerging against main event competition, couldn't handle Joe's versatility. A weird, hesitation right mesmerized and dropped Frank in the first. Manley allowed a game "Silk" to hang around into the seventh, when a left hook had him nearly gone at the bell. Again Joe failed to capitalize, and Frank survived to lose by scores of 9-1 from Eva Shain and Rocky Castellani, 8-1-1 from Frank Brunette. A candid loser admitted, "It's tough to fight guys who don't have to respect your power. If I had more, they wouldn't come right to me. I'm thinking over what I'm going to do." Frank Cappuccino, referee.

Harold (Bubba) Souther, 154, Newburyport, Mass., earned a narrow, deserved majority verdict over Mark Marciano, 152¾, Spotswood, N.J., in a bloody six. Steve Smoger, referee.

Joe Loving, 135½, Rochester, upset Victor Davis, 137, Washington, D.C., when he was unable to come out for the third round of a scheduled six. Loving's kamikaze attack was too much for the stylish Davis, who was down twice in the first and once in the second. Frank Cappuccino, referee.

Rugged Mark Weinman, 153¾, Queens, wore out and stopped Ted Dancy, 154½, Fayetteville, N.C., who took a standing eight and quit at 0:57 of the second round in a scheduled four. Steve Smoger, referee.

Thomas Warren, 134, Fayetteville, got an undeserved majority draw when the clowning of John Sessoms, 136, Philadelphia, turned off two of the judges, four. Castellani's vote to Sessoms. Steve Smoger, referee.

Vinnie Pazienza recorded the biggest win of his career with a one-punch, second-round knockout over Melvin Paul at Harrah's Marina Hotel/Casino.

▶ATLANTIC CITY—Harrah's Marina Hotel-Casino—As endings go, this one had "film at eleven" written all over it. When Main Events promotes over television, you know darn well that this will make their highline lead in.

The cast? "The agony of defeat" will be played by Melvin Paul, 136¾, out of New Orleans, La., while, "The thrill of victory" character has been filled by Vinnie Pazienza, 138, Cranston, R.I.

The ending? Pazienza scores a one-punch knockout at 1:21 of round two in a scheduled ten.

The build-up. Pazienza comes out tentatively. Paul is backing up with a cute come-hither look and popping Vinnie as he approaches. Paul is winning the round but then, Paz is cut on the scalp above the right eye. Angered, Vinnie shifts into high gear and tears after and into a somewhat shocked Paul. Vinnie takes the round with that last minute outburst.

He continues to pour it on from all angles with the opening of round two. He has Paul on the ropes, daring him to unload as Melvin draws back his own right, it is the beginning of the end.

The climax. Seeing Paul draw, Vinnie unleashes a rolling, swaggering counter right from waaaaaay back. It comes thundering down the shoot, zeroing in perfectly on poor Paul's chin. POW! Paul crashes face first, as if slowly unfolding off the ten-meter board. The crowd erupts; ref Tony Perez doesn't bother with finishing the count; Pazienza leaps to the top of the ropes.

Pazienza in now 17-0, 1 no contest, with 14 kayoes. Paul should retire with a 21-6, 13 kayoes mark. At this stage of a career, they don't come back from knockouts like this classic.

John Duplessis, 136, New Orleans, La., went to 17-0 with a six-round unanimous decision over Darrell Jacobs, 131¾, Newport News, Va. It was a rout, with John winning every round on every card. Jacobs was dropped in round four but managed to survive the thirty minutes because Duplessis is apparently a weak puncher, or had a case of stage fright. Ted Pick, referee.

Bob Guiducci, 141¾, Weymouth, Ma., won a four-round unanimous decision over Esau Staley, 142½, Trenton, N.J. Good action bout. Tony Perez, referee.

Floyd Favors, 130, Capitol Heights, Md., won a six-round unanimous decision over Larry Leone, 131¾, Bronx. Favors survived a rocky first round, in which referee Pick actually missed a knockdown of Favors, to adhere to trainer Lou Duva and stay on the inside. He did so and came home a close but unanimous winner.

John Munduga, 153¾, Tampa, Fla., fought off the early challenge of Jose (Chi Chi) Santana, 152, Chicago, Ill., and won by a TKO at 2:47 of round seven in a scheduled eight. (Tony) Perez, referee. Munduga is now 22-0, 17 by K.O.

Chris Reid, 167½, Little Silver, N.J., fought to his second technical draw of 1985 when his bout with Wesley Reid, 169, Long Beach, N.Y., was stopped after two full rounds. It was deemed that Chris could not go on due to a cut over his right eye opened by an unintentional butt. Chris looks a willing fighter, but cuts may be his downfall. He was winning this one pretty handily. It was scheduled for eight. The ref was Pick. Chris is still unbeaten at 10-0, 9 kayoes.

Mike Picciotti raised his record to 30-2-3 (16 kayoes) with a spectacular fourth-round knockout over Pablo Baez.

▶ATLANTIC CITY—Sands Hotel Casino—Mike Picciotti may yet make some money in this brutal business, not to mention a reputation for toughness. The Ridley Park, Pa. resident came back from a see-saw fight to Pablo Baez, 148¾, Dominican Republic, in 2:50 of the fourth round in a scheduled ten.

"Picc," 147¾, took round one, setting a brisk pace against his taller foe. His attack was put on hold, however, when he was dropped by a stiff jab. Baez, realizing his man was not hurt, took the rest of the round off, as Mike was reluctant at that point to argue with the jab for the balance of round two.

Round three looked to be Pablo's best, as he had Picciotti backed onto the ropes starting to "go". Mike rallied, however, to edge the round with a closing right hand to the head.

Baez came out for round four as if nothing had happened. He dominated with bristling combinations, controlling the action and putting Mike on the ropes once again. This time, the Picciotti rally proved fatal. He landed a right to the head, a hook to the body and had Baez turned into a neutral corner from this sudden reversal. Mike battered Baez, finishing him off with a looping right hand that dropped him point blank. Referee Joe Cortez didn't even bother to complete the full count; Pablo needed assistance.

Picciotti is now 30-2-3, 16 kayoes. Baez falls to 16-14-2, 15 knockouts. This was Mike's sixth straight win coming off a two-year plus "retirement" that kept him inactive all of 1983.

Vincent Pettway, 143, Baltimore, Md., TKO'd southpaw Jose L. Alejandro, 140¼, Union City, N.J., at 1:14 of round two in a scheduled eight. Pettway was winning as he pleased and opened a nasty cut around the right eye of Alejandro early in round two. It didn't take long for the ringside physician to stop the fight. No knockdowns; the ref was Randy Neumann. Pettway is now 15-0, 13 kayoes.

Rodney Moore, 134¾, Philadelphia, scored a TKO win at the end of the first round when fellow Philadelphian Curt Adams, 135, was not allowed out for round two in scheduled six. Adams was down and generally taking a good beating; therefore, there was no good reason to let it go on. Randy Neumann, referee. Moore is now 11-2 with 5 kayoes. Adams fell to 4-4-1, with 2 kayoes.

One-day sub Larry Cheatham, 112, Philadelphia, gave away too much size as he was TKO'd at 0:45 of the fourth in a scheduled six by southpaw Fred Reed Hall, 120¼, Brooklyn, N.Y. Cheatham was dropped twice in that last round. Hall is now 6-3-2, with 3 kayoes. Larry, who as the old tale goes, is better than his record, fell to 3-8-1. Joe Cortez was referee.

Keith Grimes, 130½, Baltimore, went to 5-0 with 3 knockouts when he TKO'd Mike (New) Brown, 133, Philadelphia, at 1:21 of the first round in a scheduled four. Brown went down trying to avoid a punch and twisted his right ankle in the process. Referee Neumann ruled it a knockdown, and, after getting up, Brown could not go on because of the ankle problem. Brown is now 2-7-1.

▶ATLANTIC CITY—Tropicana Hotel-Casino—Stepping up usually means going down for Kelvin Seabrooks. Never one with the right connection, he seemingly is always matched tough. At one point, it looked as if he was actually learning from these rather rugged encounters. However, now it appears that old man wear-and-tear has rendered him as just another opponent.

Junior Featherweight," it should never have been. As it turned out, Vernon (Yogi) Buchanan, 129, St. Louis, Mo., stopped Kelvin, 125¾, Charlotte, N.C., after round six in this scheduled ten.

Seabrooks had the skill, but Buchanan had the size, and the jab. A cut around the left eye in round one was the eventual downfall for Seabrooks. By round six, it was completely closed and he did nothing that session but survive. It was stopped between the sixth and seventh. Through five rounds, Seabrooks held his own. He was much more versatile in his attack, but really couldn't hurt the bigger man. After five, it was still anybody's fight but then the eye said good night. Paul Venti, referee.

Buchanan is now 11-3-1, 8 kayoes, while Seabrooks fell to 18-13, 15 by K.O.

Rocky Young, 130, Moundsville, W. Va., won an eight-round split decision over Gary Gamble, 131¼, Indianapolis, Ind. Gamble let this one slip away. Young was cut around the left eye in round three. Milo Savage had it 4-3-1, Young; Tommy Kacznarek saw it 5-3 Gamble; and Rocky Castellani had it 5-3 for Young. The referee was Steve Smoger. The Ring had it 4-3-1, Gamble.

Rene Resto, 129¾, Brooklyn (also billed out of Springfield, Mass.), won an eight-round unanimous decision over Nedrie Simmons, 130, Toronto, Canada. Scores: Castellani and Savage, both 5-3; Kaczmarek had it 5-2-1, same as The Ring. Paul Venti, referee. Simmons is a lefty.

Tunde Foster, 136¼, a native of Manchester, England, but now residing in Brooklyn, N.Y., made a successful pro debut when he kayoed Dennis Wade, 138¼, Brooklyn, in 0:52 of round one in a scheduled four. There was just one knockdown. Steve Smoger, referee.

▶ATLANTIC CITY—Resorts Hotel-Casino—It was a quick night's work in the two scheduled tens this evening. One was by design, the other by accident.

In the top bout, Martin Quiroz, 143¼, San Jose, Calif., and John Meekins, 141¼, New York, had to settle for a technical draw ending. Their bout was stopped by ringside physicians at 2:02 of the first round when Quiroz was unable to go on because an unintentional clash of heads had left a gash on the top of his scalp.

Up until that point, nothing much had taken place; neither man yet to take control. The referee was Tony Orlando. Meekins was 9-0 with 8 knockouts going in, while Quiroz, a last minute substitute, was a reported 24-7-2 with 18 kayoes when he entered the ring.

The "by design" ending took place a little earlier when Smokin' Bert Cooper, 197, Philadelphia kayoed Cedric Parsons, 195, Nova Scotia, Canada/Brockton, Mass., at just 0:46 of round one. Bert, as is his custom, came out swiftly and, within seconds, had Parsons taking a standing eight-count from referee Joe Cortez. Cooper jumped on him without hesitation after the count and put Parsons down heavily in a neutral corner. Cortez didn't even bother to count.

A K.O. was ordered, because Parsons was hurt enough not to go through the motions of a ten-count, and also because a K.O. loss means a longer suspension than just a TKO defeat. Parsons will need the rest. Cooper is now 10-0 with 9 kayoes. Parsons is 11-3, 7 wins by knockout.

George Leach, 146¾, Baltimore, Md., turned southpaw for the night and, with it, took a close but unanimous decision over Robert (Sugar) Mendez, 148½, Philadelphia. The tall Leach jumped to an early lead, but just hung on through the middle rounds of this eight-rounder. In the sixth, took back the mmomentum by hurting Mendez and almost putting him down. Mendez rallied in the last round, but fell just short. Frank Brunette and Frank Cairo both had it 5-3, Joe Pasquale had it 4-3-1, same as The Ring. Joe Cortez, referee.

Mike Jefferson, 163, New York, won by TKO at 2:08 of round two in a scheduled four against Bo Lattimer, 166¼, Trenton, N.J. Bo was dropped once in that round. Both boxers are southpaws. Joe Cortez, referee.

Henry Milligan, 182¾, Wilmington, Dela., TKO'd southpaw Bobby Thomas, 182¼, Lochgelly, W. Va., at 0:39 of round two in a scheduled six. Thomas was never in this bout. He was dropped once in the first, also taking a standing eight-count in that session. Referee Orlando stopped it when Thomas showed he hadn't recovered from that first round beating.

▶CHADDS FORD—Brandywine Club—Boxing returned with a fall schedule at this hot little club outside Philadelphia. Club hero Henry Milligan faced his toughest foe yet in Rick Spain, and didn't escape without a scare. Spain, 190½, Columbus, Ohio, dumped Milligan, 186, Wilmington, with a right in the first. But Rick got careless while attacking in the third of a scheduled six, and was kayoed by a sensational right counter in 0:24. Tommy Reid, referee.

Another club favorite fared worse, as Steve Sheeran, 165½, Upper Darby, was thoroughly beaten up and stopped by Steve Johnson, 161, Philadelphia, at 2:48 of the fifth round in a scheduled eight. A tiring Sheeran made a desperation rally, then was rocked into the ropes and cut, receiving a standing eight before ref Ozzie Sadler halted it.

Returning Ali Bey, 159½, Wilmington, TKO'd Kelvin Hanton, 162½, Philadelphia, with two knockdowns in 2:58 of the second round in their scheduled six. Tommy Reid, referee.

Southpaw Gustavo Lopez,130½, Lancaster, proved too experienced for young Sterling Staton, 134, Philadelphia, scoring a third round knockdown on way to a unaminous win, four. Tommy Reid, referee.

MICHAEL GLENN

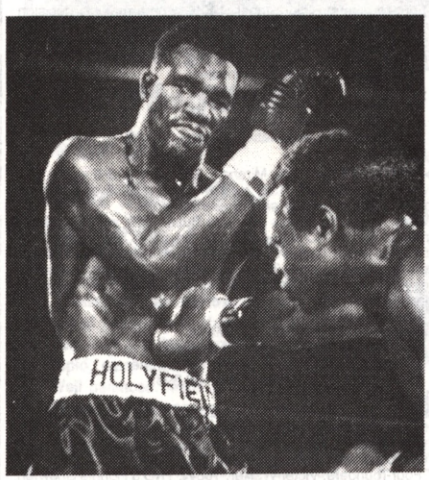
VIRGINIA

▶VIRGINIA BEACH—Pavilion Convention Center—Four of the 1984 Olympians traded punches while another traded vows on a televised (except for the wedding) Wide World of Sports fight card.

Meldrick Taylor, 136, Philly, and Victor Acosta, also 136, Yonkers, engaged in a thrilling eight-rounder that saw the now 9-0 (six kayoes) Taylor take a unanimous decision. Meldrick, managed by Shelley Finkel, and trained by Lou Duva and George Benton, took the early rounds, hurting Acosta in round four with body shots. The New Yorker made things interesting in rounds five through seven, while Taylor staged a strong effort in the final frame.

All three judges scored the bout 79-71, though it must be noted that Acosta was docked two points for low blows by ref John Witt. Acosta's record slipped to 17-10-1 (two kayoes).

Meldrick threw lots of leather, but he was tagged often by the southpaw Acosta—blows that should be avoided by someone with Taylor's quickness.



Olympic light heavyweight bronze medalist Evander Holyfield shot into the top 10 rankings with a fourth round TKO victory over Anthony Davis at the Pavilion Convention Center in Virginia Beach.

Evander Holyfield, 185½, Atlanta, also from the Finkel-Duva stable), and rated Anthony Davis, 186, Las Vegas, fought a war. And when the dust cleared, Holyfield had emerged victorious by a technical knockout at 1:31 of the fourth round.

Holyfield edged the first two rounds, but Davis, fighting out of a crouch and constantly moving in, landed plenty of looping shots while taking Evander's straight deliveries. Early in the third, two left uppercuts and a right hurt the Olympic bronze medalist, but the "Real Deal" fired back even harder. Late in the round, he dazed Davis with a pair of sharp lefts and a right. That combo opened cuts in Davis' mouth and damaged his nose.

Holyfield's first jab in the fourth worsened Davis' assuredly busted beak. Landing at will, Holyfield finally dropped Davis with a couple of booming rights. Anthony, bleeding badly, reached his feet at 10, but referee Al Rothenberger sensibly stopped the fight.

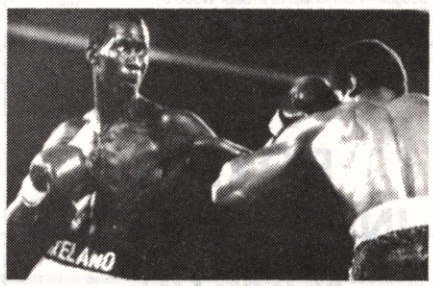
Evander's record now stands at 8-0 (five kayoes). Davis, a top 10 cruiser according to both the WBA and WBC, drops to 17-4. The loser said of Holyfield, "He's a very skillful fighter. When he got hit, he didn't get excited. He just relaxed and relied on his boxing ability."

Holyfield absorbed a few punches, but shined nonetheless. He is already slated to fight the winner of the Qawi-Leon Spinks 195-pound title clash scheduled for March. Betcha he'll beat either guy.

The "revised model" Tyrell Biggs, 216, Philadelphia, continued to mature—this time at the painful expense of Detroiter Tony Anthony, 230. Both came out winging. Anthony landed a few clean ones, but in the final minute of round one, Tyrell hurt the Kronk heavyweight with a left hook. An extended follow-up flurry put Anthony down for the count in his own corner. Officially, Biggs wins by knockout at 2:57 of the first round. Ernie Green refereed.

Anthony later claimed he had been caught by a thumb or a seam, though he did not mean to discredit Biggs' impressive showing.

When the now 7-0 (five kayoes) Biggs was asked if he could have used a little more work, he responded, "No, I wish the fight would have ended even sooner. I know what sort of condition I'm in; eight rounds wouldn't have been a problem. I just wanted to make sure that when I hit someone, something happened." Anthony's record fell to 16-5.



Welterweight gold medalist Mark Breland won a unanimous eight-round decision over Hedgemon Robertson on the Virginia Beach show. Breland is now 8-0 in the pro ranks.

Mark Breland, 148, Brooklyn, had to struggle somewhat to seal up his eighth straight triumph (Mark has four knockouts). The welter sensation damaged both of his injury prone hands in the first couple of rounds of a scheduled eight with Los Angeles vet Hedgemon Robertson, 144. Breland hurt Robertson in both the third and fourth rounds, but by the final stanza, Robertson's confidence asserted itself and Mark was in too much pain to do much other than survive. Consequently, Robertson managed a few decent punches in the eighth. Afterwards, Breland stated, "In those last rounds, I was just trying to move around and avoid him because of my hands."

The decision for Breland was appropriately lopsided—all judges giving him a victory margin of six or seven points.

Robertson, who had to contend with a pair of embarrassingly ripped shorts much of the way, was disappointed—mainly in himself—after the decision was rendered. "I wasted too many rounds. I'd like to fight him in a 10-rounder." Robertson's record slipped to 21-6-1. Rothenberger reffed.

If Mark's hands heal quickly, Finkel and Duva plan a move into 10-round terrain with a bout against fellow unbeaten Troy Wortham.

In anothe pleasing imbroglio, David Gonzalez, 129, Galena Park, Texas, decisioned Jose (Speedy) Gonzalez, 131, Virginia Beach, to raise his record to 6-1 (four kayoes). Speedy now stands at 15-11. Ernie Green served as third man.

To close out the program, area favorite Pernell (Sweet Pea) Whitaker of Norfolk, unable to box because of an ankle injury, married long-time sweetheart Rovanda Anthony in a ceremony conducted by Reverend I. Joseph Willis of the Antioch Church of Norfolk.

▶FORT WORTH—Robert Byrd, 131, Texas, won an unpopular unanimous decision over Rogelio Lopez, also 131, Texas, six. These junior lightweights put on a real donnybrook. It is rare and exciting to see equilibrium in a fighter with only five bouts under his belt, but Byrd has that and more. With his eyes as wide as two fifty-cent pieces, he bobs his head from side-to-side, and almost charms his foes to sleep.

Lupe Miranda, 129, Fort Worth, another talented junior lightweight, took his log to 5-0 with a TKO over Oklahoma's William Garcia, 126¾, at 2:58 of the second round in their scheduled six.

Tim Bryan, 145¾, Texas, TKO'd Pablo Valdez, 146, Texas, at 2:34 of the second in another scheduled six.

PUERTO RICO

▶NOTES—A total of 21 pro boxing shows were held in Puerto Rico in 1985, compared with 18 in 1984. Eighteen of those 21 shows, however, were of the "Boxeo Caliente" (club variety), as compared with only 11 the previous year.

The Puerto Rican awards for 1985:

FIGHT OF THE YEAR—Ramon Cruz Crespo's 12-round split decision over Juan Manuel Miranda for the Puerto Rican 122-pound title.

UPSETS OF THE YEAR—Tonito Rivera's kayo over Alberto Mercado and Wilfredo Gomez's points win over Rocky Lockridge for the world junior lightweight crown.

COMEBACK OF THE YEAR—Wilfredo Gomez.

PROSPECTS OF THE YEAR—Bayamon featherweight Edwin Diaz (6-0) and Danny Garcia, the new Puerto Rican welterweight king.

PING PONG AWARD OF THE YEAR—Carlos Santos. His on-and-off fight with Davey Moore was a cruel way for a lot of local people to treat a nice guy.

NOSTALGIC MOMENTS OF THE YEAR—The passing of ace trainer Frank Parrilla and the long due recognition of Luis Alberto Caquias, who, at 87, is still doing a grand job of training fighters.

MANAGER OF THE YEAR—Ismael Leandry, Carlos Santos' manager, who worked his butt off to get Carlos his first big money fight against Davey Moore.

LONGEST PROGRAM OF THE YEAR—February 2, 1985 at Roberto Clemente Coliseum, when a total of 103 scheduled rounds made up the Callejas-Lee WBA junior featherweight title card.

LOUSIEST FIGHT OF THE YEAR—Top ranked flyweight Jose DeJesus' dismal performance against Dominican Bernardo Diaz Rosa. DeJesus was the lucky recipient of a seven-round technical draw due to an accidental head butt. Diaz was the aggressor in what little action there was in this "fight."

MOST ACTIVE FIGHTERS OF THE YEAR—This category was dominated by the Cruz clan. Junior featherweight Jesus had six contests, flyweight Victor had five, and junior feather Ramon had five.

BEST INTERNATIONAL PERFORMANCE OF THE YEAR—Samuel Fuentes, who, with less than a dozen fights under his belt, knocked out former IBF lightweight champion Harry Arroyo. Honorable mention to WBA featherweight champion Victor Callejas for his thrilling victory over Loris Stecca in Rimini, Italy.

WORST INTERNATIONAL PERFORMANCE OF THE YEAR—Rafael Solis' knockout at the hands of Bobby Chacon. A fight he could have won.

QUEENSLAND

▶BRISBANE—Festival Hall—Australian welterweight champion Brian Janssen, 148, met Argentinian Carlos Prieto, 149, in a return. They met one month earlier for a draw in a very good bout. This return was at least as good, and it ended in a points win for Janssen. But decision was split.

Judge Cyril Cairns carded for Carlos, 96-95. Judge Steve Scott saw it Janssen's way, 97-96. Judge John Bailey had it 98-93 in favor of Janssen. Alan Moore was the non-scoring referee.

This was the fight of the year in Queensland. Fighter Janssen versus boxer Prieto.

Surprising that a 12-round title bout should be the main support to a 10-round non-title, but that is what happened this night. The reason is that Janssen is the biggest local draw in Brisbane.

The 12-rounder was for the Australian cruiserweight title, with champion Kevin Wagstaff, 189, holding his place on the throne with a points decision over Roy Bijkerk, 193½, scores being 116-115 by judge Ed Francis, 116-113 by Cyril Cairns, and 118-115 by John Cox. Non-scoring ref was Denzil Creed.

Quite a good contest, but it lacked thrills.

Over eight rounds, Tom West, 183, outpointed Rick Kulu, 174. Unanimous in solid fight. Alan Moore refereed; Bailey, Cox, and Col Kanofski judged.

Graeme Jeffries, 133, halted Cyclone George, 134¾, in round five of an eight. Jeffries was too good. He decked George, who beat the 10 but was gone. Referee Creed stopped it.

Johnny Laycock, 134, outpointed Mike Slivka, 138, four.

▶MANLY WEST—Wynnum-Manly Rugby League Club—Open-air show on a Sunday afternoon. Down came the rain midway through the semi-wind-up. The rain got heavier, and the main event between Johnny Fooks and Bobby Mastro was cancelled.

Over eight rounds Guy Parker, 150, outpunched Tony Campbell, 154¼, in a very hard battle to take a unanimous points decision from John Hogg, John Cox and Larry Roberts. Referee: Steve Scott.

In another eight, Gary Tomlinson, 157½, clearly outpointed Peter Mistroianni, 159¼, in a punishing fight. Judges were John Hogg, John Cox, and Johnny Shields. Referee: Denzil Creed. This was one of the best eight-rounders of the year.

Steve Frazier, 183½, kayoed veteran Paul Donnelly, 186¼, in round three of a six-rounder. Referee Scott counted out Donnelly.

VICTORIA

▶PRESTON—Town Hall—Former Australian amateur champion Wilf Gentzen, 141, had too much on the ball for Paul Mauger, 143¼, in their 10-round bout for the vacant Victoria State welter title, winning by K.O. in round five. Mauger's trainer threw in the towel after Gentzen scored a knockdown. Referee Gus Mercurio acknowledged it and stopped the contest. Judges were Johnny Wheeler and Cliff Heaver.

Ken Carter, 139, outboxed Joe Cutajar, 137¾, to take a points decision over six. Jim Boland refereed. Judges were Johnny Wheeler and Pauline Steinmann.

In another six, Johnny Sacco, 149¾, making a comeback after four years, won a split decision over Russell Richter, 147¾. Referee Johnny Wheeler and judge Jim Boland carded for Sacco. Judge Chris Anderson saw it Richter's way.

Over four rounds, Tommy Mangan, 130, outpointed Ritchie Corrigan, 132¼. Referee: Tony Parisi. Judges: Chris Anderson and Carey Young.

Three rounds: Mark Bateman, 160¾, outpointed much heavier Glen Irvine, 180¾. Greg Foster, 143¼, drew with Graham McKenzie, 142.

Illinois Woman Receives LOURDES MEDAL– Wins $20,000.00.

Gets Lourdes Medal for Daughter– Daughter Wins $3,000.00!

My name is Jean Connell.

And believe me . . . I wasn't born yesterday.

I'm a housewife blessed with a lovely family. This year I'll be celebrating my 35th Wedding Anniversary.

That's me in the snapshot, with my daughter. Do I look like the kind of person who sends away for "lucky charms"? I'm not, I assure you.

(What I'm holding in the picture is a $20,000.00 winners check! But I'm jumping ahead of my story.)

I've always been skeptical of Good Luck Pieces. . .

Until I read an announcement about the miraculous LOURDES MEDAL.

This LOURDES MEDAL has genuine Holy Water straight from Lourdes — the Miracle Site in France.

I checked — and I learned that this is the famed Sacred Holy Water that has brought Good Luck to thousands upon thousands of people.

I also checked the part about "miracles". Do you know that four million miracle-seekers go to Lourdes EVERY YEAR to be next to this Holy Water? That the blind come here to regain their sight? The deaf to hear again? The crippled to walk once more?

I also found out that scientists and religious leaders say that the holy Lourdes water create amazing miracles which defy reasoning. And that not a single pilgrim has reported disappointment with the Lourdes water.

I thought to myself: could scientists and religious leaders be wrong? Could four million miracle-seekers be wrong?

I decided to send for my own LOURDES MEDAL.

How could I lose? The price was amazingly low — only $10.00. And even that small amount would be returned if I didn't find all the Good Luck I expected.

Was I glad I made the decision to send for the LOURDES MEDAL!

Here's what happened: The day I received my Medal I won $400.00 in the lottery and shortly afterwards won $20,000.00. Thrilled as I could be, I bought another LOURDES MEDAL for my daughter. Guess what? She immediately won $3,000.00!

How about you? Do you need Good Luck also? Then don't miss this chance to get a LOURDES MEDAL for yourself. You can look forward to Good Luck also.

God bless you.

Jean Connell

Here's Jean Connell with her daughter after she sent in $10 for each of their Lourdes Medals.

VETERAN BOXERS BEAT

by CHARLIE SPINA

Jimmy McLarnin training for his rematch with Barney Ross in 1934. Jimmy, now 79, is currently living in Glendale, California.

JAMES ARCHIBALD MCLARNIN WAS born on December 19, 1906, in Inchacore, Ireland. Jimmy's family immigrated to the United States when he was one year old. Four years later his father moved the family north across the Canadian border to Vancouver, British Columbia. Jimmy started to box at the age of 10 in a made-up gym. He was discovered by Pop Foster in a school boxing tournament in 1921. At that time Jimmy was only 16 and weighed 105 pounds.

McLarnin's first pro bout was with George Ainsworth in 1923, whom he defeated in four rounds. McLarnin made news when he defeated the world's amateur and Olympic champion, Fidel LaBarba, in Los Angeles in 1924. The following year, when the State of California changed the state law to permit 10-round main events, Jimmy defeated LaBarba in his first 10 rounder. Next he was beaten by Bud Taylor in 10.

In his next fight Jimmy zoomed to world prominence by defeating the world flyweight champion Pancho Villa in Oakland, California on July 4th, 1925. Next he kayoed Jackie Fields in two. Although fighting successfully as both a flyweight and bantamweight, he knocked out the former featherweight champion Louis (Kid) Kaplan in 1927.

On February 24, 1928, he stopped the sensational Sid Terris in one round in New York City. Jimmy hit the east coast by storm, becoming one of boxing's greatest drawing cards from the years 1928-1936. His victories over such great fighters as Sammy Mandell, Billy Petrolle, Young Jack Thompson, Ruby Goldstein, Benny Leonard, Al Singer, Sgt. Sammy Baker, Barney Ross, Tony Canzoneri and Lou Ambers made him one of boxing's greats.

Jimmy won the welterweight title by scoring a one round knockout over Young Corbet III in Los Angeles on May 29, 1933. He lost the title to Barney Ross in 1934, regaining it the same year and lost it back to Barney in 1935. The following year he fought the great Tony Canzoneri twice, each winning one. In his last bout, McLarnin defeated Lou Ambers on November 20, 1936 in New York City. In a career of 77 bouts, Jimmy was declared the winner 62 times.

McLarnin was elected to The Ring's Boxing Hall of Fame in 1956. Today he lives in Glendale, California, where he is very active in veteran boxing affairs. Jimmy recently lost his beloved wife Lillian. He is the father of a son and two daughters and is also a grandfather. Jimmy celebrated his 79th birthday this past December. Here's wishing this fine gentleman and former fistic great many more in the years to come.

ON OCTOBER 26, 1985 THE WORLD BOXing Hall of Fame in Los Angeles added 15 new members to its scrolls. Inducted were: Jack Fiske, Ruben Oliveras, Floyd Patterson, Kid Chocolate, Kid Gavilan, Gene Fullmer, Jimmy Cannon, Maxie Rosenbloom, Billy Petrolle, Jack Solomons, Eddie Eagan, Chris Dandee, Cus D'Amato, Jackie McCoy and Gil Claney.

THE NEW OFFICERS OF RING 4 OF BOSton for 1986 are Buddy Hayes, president; Eddie Bangs, 1st, vice-president; Russ Kelcourse, 2nd, vice-president; Bob Mallard, secretary; Ed Fitzerald, treasurer; George DeFillippo, assistant treasurer; Jerry Albano and Charlie Ross, directors.

NOBLE (KID) CHISSELL, THE VERY VERsatile gentleman from Glendale, California, has enjoyed a career that has encompassed the ABC's of show business—actor, boxer, columnist. He has been honored by Southern California motion picture industry for his 1,000 film credits. Chissell was also U.S. Navy middleweight boxing champion in 1932. As an actor he appeared in movies such as Abe Lincoln in Illinois, Dillinger, Bonnie and Clyde, Big Foot, They Shoot Horses, Don't They?, and Home in Indiana. He was also seen in 32 of the Bob Hope TV specials. Besides being a USN boxing champion, Chissell was also a carnival barker, prison officer, deputy sheriff, walkathon marathon champ, railroad fireman and artist model. He recently won a Senior Olympic boxing gold medal in the middleweight division at the LA Convention Center.

Chissell and former welter champion Jimmy McLarnin, another Glendale resident, were honored at the Grand Closing of the Hollywood Legion Stadium, which was due for demolition. The Legion had a pugilistic life span of 40 years (1920-1960). Chissell was graced with more honors when a documentary of his boxing screen career was shown on the TV series All About Us.

(More on Noble Chissell next month in the April issue.)

ON DECEMBER 4, 1985, THE NEW IBF heavyweight champion Michael Spinks was honored by the Essex County Board of Chosen Freeholders at the Essex County Hall of Records in Newark, New Jersey. Spinks received a special award for his far-reaching charitable work and efforts on behalf of America's youth.

The presentation kicked off a day that included a speech to members of Newark's Central High School's senior class and a visit with young patients at the University of Medicine and Dentistry of New Jersey's College Hospital. Spinks signed autographs and encouraged the youngsters "to hurry and get well."

JOHN F. PANICA, 92, FORMER WORLD middleweight champion during the Roaring Twenties who boxed under the name of Johnny Wilson, passed away on December 8, 1985 after contracting pneumonia at a hospital where he was recuperating from a broken hip.

The New York native won the middleweight crown in 1920 by beating Mike O'Dowd and lost the title three years later to Harry Greb. During Prohibition and into the Depression years, he managed the Silver Slipper, a Broadway night club. At the time of his death, Wilson/Panica was a respected member of Ring 4, VBA of Boston. Rest In Peace. □

FOR TYRELL BIGGS
Heavyweight Prospect

Q: I loved the way you blasted out Tony Anthony. Are you trying to please the fans with a more aggressive style?
J.T., PHILADELPHIA, PA

A: The public likes the killer instinct. They like to see somebody's nose broken out there and I'm going to try and give them what they want.

FOR MICHAEL OLAJIDE JR.
Canadian Middleweight Champion

Q: Venezuelan Elio Diaz gave you a tough fight before you cut him up for a TKO win. You usually don't take so many punches. How come you let Diaz trick you into trading blow for blow?
G.I., VANCOUVER, B.C.

A: There is nowhere to hide when you're punching against the ropes. I was hoping he'd leave himself open. Besides, the fans really seemed to enjoy the toe-to-toe stuff.

FOR BOB ARUM
President of Top Rank Inc.

Q: What do you think about the New Jersey State Commission of Investigation saying that boxing is dominated by organized crime?
L.H., WILDWOOD, N.J.

A: I find it absolutely incomprehensible. We (Top Rank) are the major promoter in Atlantic City and we have no involvement with organized crime. No one in organized crime has ever approached me.

FOR DON KING
Promoter

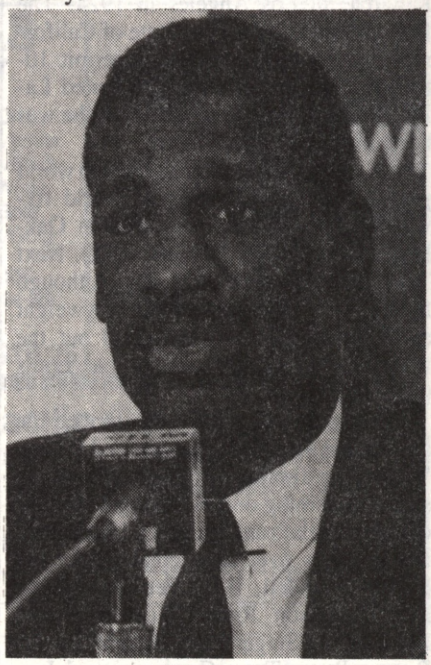
Q: I read that your tax trial cost you millions of dollars in legal fees. How do you feel about all the money you spent to stay out of jail?
C.A., BRONX, N.Y.

A: The cost of freedom is always high. But I never lost faith in America and its system of justice.

FOR LEON SPINKS
Former World Heavyweight Champion

Q: I read about your knockout over previously unbeaten Kip Kane for the Continental Americas title. How would you rate your performance?
J.B.D., ORLANDO, FLA.

A: It was a good fight for me considering I didn't fight for six months. I guess I could have taken him out sooner, but that Irish guy (Kane) was real tough. We now have two belts in the (Spinks) family.



FOR MICHAEL SPINKS
IBF Heavyweight champion

Q: Now that you've beaten Larry Holmes, will you keep going and try to beat Rocky Marciano's undefeated record?
G.B., NEW YORK, N.Y.

A: No, that would be too many fights. I do not intend to lose, though. I'm going to retire undefeated.

RONNIE ESSETT
MIDDLEWEIGHT

UNDEFEATED MIDDLEWEIGHT RONNIE (THE DRAGON) Essett had his heart set on going to the 1984 Olympics, but wound up losing a close decision to eventual gold medalist Frank Tate in the box-offs . . . "It was a close fight, but he (Tate) didn't prove anything except that he could outdance me," says Essett. "But everything happens for a reason. Losing to Tate just made me want to work harder. It lit a fire under my butt." . . . So far, that fire has carried Essett to eight straight victories as a pro, with seven of his wins coming inside the distance. In his most impressive start to date, Ronnie outpointed Victor Claudio in a battle of unbeaten prospects, televised nationally on the ESPN cable . . . "Claudio was real tough," recalls Essett. "He stood up for eight rounds. I feel the win helped give me some credibility." . . . Although Ronnie's knockout percentage speaks well for his hitting power, he considers himself more than just a puncher . . . "I'm a tactician in the ring. Boxing is like a chess game. I try to outsmart the other guy one step at a time." . . . In his last fight of 1985, Essett fought on an unusual card in his hometown of Indianapolis. The match was held in the Market Square Arena after a basketball game between the Pacers and the Denver Nuggetts . . . "Something like 7,500 people out of a crowd of over 10,000 stayed to watch the fights," said Ronnie, who stopped Jesse Abrams in the second round . . . Although the 22-year-old Essett is only just beginning his pro career, he is already thinking about life after boxing . . . "I'm very ambitious in areas outside of boxing. A lot of boxers throw so much into their ring careers, they have nothing to look forward to after their careers are over. That's why so many make comebacks. I intend to go to college and study business and communications. Then maybe I can be like Sugar Ray Leonard." . . . But first things first. Before Essett joins Leonard behind the microphone, he has a lot of fighting to do. □

JUNIOR LIGHTWEIGHT

WHEN JOHNNY dE lA ROSA LOST TO JUAN LAPORTE BY A controversial 12-round split decision in a 1983 bid to win the WBC featherweight title, most folks felt that de la Rosa would get another crack at the belt in the near future. But it didn't work out quite that way for the talented boxer-puncher from the Dominican Republic. Over the next 12 months, de la Rosa only went to the post three times (all wins), and his career began to fizzle. Matters hit rock bottom in May of '85, when Johnny was stopped by Antonio Esparragoza in Aruba. It was the first time de la Rosa had failed to go the distance as a pro, and it was beginning to look like Johnny wasn't the future champion many thought he would be when he turned pro in 1980 following a 51-6 amateur career . . . In an effort to get back into high gear, de la Rosa left his adopted home in Florida and joined Emanuel Steward's Kronk Boxing Team in Detroit. So far, the change has proven beneficial. De La Rosa has streaked to three straight wins during his first four months as a member of the Kronk stable . . . "I heard what a nice guy Emanuel was and was lucky to find out first hand," de la Rosa said. "I know he (Steward) can get me what I'm looking for, and that's another championship fight." . . . de la Rosa, 22, has picked up many of the tricks of the trade during his 30 pro bouts (28-2, 23 kayoes). Although he can mix it up on the inside when necessary, Johnny normally likes to keep the action at long range, striking hard and fast when his opponent makes a mistake. . . . He also realizes that it sometimes takes more than skill to be a successful fighter . . . "I'd like to put on a good show for the fans. That's always important, since they're the ones paying the money." . . . With an attitude like that and Emanuel Steward's connections, 1986 just might be the year de la Rosa gets his elusive second chance at a world championship. □

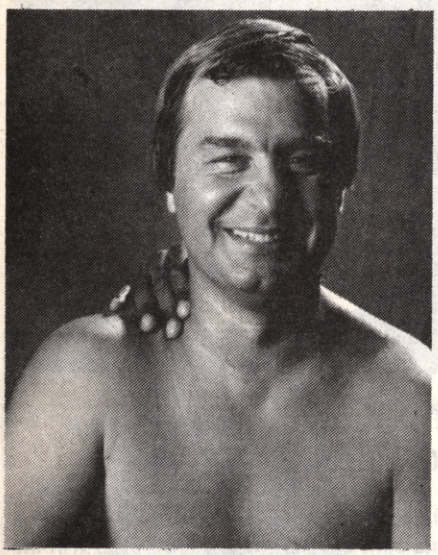
Jessie Reid (Trainer)



NOT MANY MEN MAKE A LIVING training prizefighters. The ones that are good at it are as rare as the great champions. Jessie Reid is just 42 years old, and though that seems young for what he does, Reid is one of the top trainers in the sport today.

For nearly two years Reid has been advisor and trainer for the Houston Boxing Association. Before that, he worked in Las Vegas and Los Angeles. Reid has trained four world champions: lightweight Rodolfo Gonzalez, (champion 1972-74); junior middleweight Oscar Albarado, (champion 1974-75); junior welterweight Bruce Curry, (champion 1983-84); and junior lightweight Roger Mayweather, (champion 1983-84). What is impressive is not the number of titleholders, but the fact that they are hardly the most talented group of fighters ever assembled. But Reid took what ability they had and helped them make the most of it.

Reid has a strong, thick body, rounded features, and a cheerful nature. He is the kind of person that ends up listening to everyone's troubles. When he was 25, and an ex-Marine, he tried to make it as a fighter.

"I started too late in boxing," he says, "and I gave it up when I was 29 because I realized I wasn't going anywhere." Reid was a tough, aggressive middleweight, but he had trouble getting fights. He won 13 straight before losing a split decision.

"I retired after I lost and I wanted to stay as far away from boxing as I could," Reid said. "One day my former manager, Jackie McCoy, asked if I'd supervise four of his fighters. I said yes because he is such a great trainer. I only thought I'd do it for a short while, to help him out. Then I worked with Rodolfo Gonzalez, really put my heart into it, and when he won the title I felt very proud. Something always came along that kept me in boxing. I have never gone looking for a fighter. I tried being a manager, but I'm not cut out for it. I'm much better as a trainer."

Long before he was taking fighters to New York or Europe, Reid was happy to drive into some tank town with a fighter. Born with pure enthusiasm, and filled with hope, Reid had days of disappointment, and when he couldn't do everything he doubted his ability.

"The hardest times for me were when I felt I couldn't move a fighter any further. I had Jesse Burnett and he was rated number one in the world for a year and a half but he couldn't buy a title shot. It hurt me that I couldn't help him more. When he finally got a chance at the light heavyweight title it was with nine days' notice! And the fight was in Monte Carlo! I was told that if we didn't take the bout, 'Burnett will never fight on national television again.' He waited a long time for a break. That's the kind of thing that's bad in boxing. When a fighter doesn't get a decent chance."

Of all the bad days and setbacks Reid has faced, his worst agony came with Bruce Curry. It is unlikely he'll ever encounter as much trouble again.

"I never saw a fighter with more heart than Bruce Curry," Reid says, but not with happiness. "Every fighter is different. Mayweather can't take a good punch. If you told Rodolfo Gonzalez he was going to fight Roberto Duran he'd pass out right on the spot. Bruce had emotional problems. He could destroy money like no one else. He'd give it away and then come begging for a fight. I made a mistake putting him in with Hearns. He was stopped in the third. I worried he was ruined by that fight.

"When I first met Bruce I was told he was a headcase, not to bother with him. But I saw how Bruce really loved to fight and no one would work with him. In ways I was a parent to him. I spent eight years with him, through a lot of good and bad times, and a lot of troubles. If I had the chance to do it all over again, well,—I won't."

When Curry lost his title he was urged by Reid to retire. Despondent, Curry went to the gym the next day, opened the door, and fired a shot at Reid. The bullet missed. Though Reid chose not to press charges, a judge had Curry committed to the state mental institution.

Reid travels back and forth between Houston and Atlantic City, working at least five shows a month. He does road work in the morning and is a sparring partner in the gym. Sometimes he has looked at some of the middleweight contenders around and caught a bit of the feeling that stirs a fighter. Reid doesn't like to talk about boxing with people outside of the sport. He doesn't think he could explain it to them. Reid married his high school girlfriend, Christine, 21 years ago. They have two children and an adopted son. A night out on the town for them is spent competing in league bowling.

Perhaps because he never expected to be a boxing trainer, Reid tried too hard to find out where he fit in. Now, he no longer worries about it. Once in a while he dreams of champions, but not very often.

"It would be nice to have a heavyweight champion, sure, that's something every trainer has thought about," Reid claims. "But that's not the reason I'm in this. The really important thing to me, what is personal, is to take a fighter that no one else thinks will go anywhere, a kid that never got a fair shake, work with him, and then see THAT KID BECOME SOMETHING! To me, I love that kind of guy that will give everything he has, and if he doesn't have all the talent, well, he's got the desire.

"Boxing is a tough, tough business," Reid says with passion, "and that's what turns me on, the kid with one chance out of 100, just an underdog, but with the heart, can make it. That's a great thing to see." □
